THE SAVVY SENIOR
 By CAROL MARTIN

Lawyers killing health care? (Created by Mary Mahoney)
 Americans suddenly see doctors fleeing from their profession. Bureaucracy, paperwork, excessive medical litigation, and skyrocketing liability insurance costs are forcing doctors to change specialties, move their practices, or leave health care altogether.

One reason health care is in serious crisis: skyrocketing insurance premiums. They drive doctors away. For example, Mississippi anticipates losing 20 percent of its doctors in the next year. Las Vegas, Nev. will lose 10 percent. That is a crisis.

Hospitals are being closed. A Nevada trauma center closed for 10 days because surgeons could not afford insurance premiums. Some annual rates had risen from $40,000 to $200,000. The nearest equivalent trauma center is five hours away, seriously threatening the lives of patients needing emergency care. Other states face similar problems.

Patients are being subjected to additional, and often unnecessary, testing simply because doctors are threatened by possible lawsuits at every turn. In fact, 79 percent of doctors said they ordered more tests than they normally would, for fear of lawsuits.

Patients who are injured by bad doctors or institutions should be able to recover proper damages. But we have a badly broken system of litigation explosions that are not serving the best interest of all patients across the country.

States that have reasonable caps on non-economic damages appear to have experienced real health-care cost savings. If these caps were applied nationally, studies based on the experience of certain states indicate:

**Up to $108 BILLION per year in health-care costs could be redirected from lawsuits and unnecessary "defensive" care into valuable drugs and other treatments.

**Up to $44.3 BILLION per year in reduced federal health-care payments could be instead invested in innovative market solutions for Medicare, Medicaid, and other federal health programs. This savings could help fund a solution for Medicare's future through Personal Health Accounts owned by Americans.

If the federal Health and Human Services Dept. is right, $1 TRILLION-plus in health-care cost savings could be achieved during a 10-year period.
