Program at Dome Sch. for Rangers

By SHANE WELSH
Staff Writer
(Second of two parts)

Last year, the Takilma Dome School Rangers program obtained a Title III grant for non-profit forest related activities due to an educational trail that Rangers built around the school.

Children can follow a "Nature guide" along a 3/4-mile trail providing woodland education about plants, wildlife and insects.

Children can learn to take photos with a digital camera, and then get to look up information about plants using their photos.

The Rangers have made ceramic examples of critters they found on the trail and plan to place ceramic signs they have made to identify Nature items along the trail.

As grant funding dwindles, the Dome School Rangers program may slip through the financial cracks.

The program has been free for any children age 6 to 12 who want to attend; regardless of whether they are enrolled at the school.

"That has proven to be the greatest challenge for the Rangers," said Dave Toler, program director. "We've gone through seven years of grants from outside this community."

Funding began with an annual $23,000 Delinquency Prevention Grant. According to Toler, Evergreen Elementary School used 18 months worth of the funding for its program before turning it over to Dome School.

"The major support of the program has been the Josephine County Commission for Children and Families, which has helped support the program for seven years," said Toler.

After the first 18 months, the non-renewable federal grant ran out. For the next four years, the Rangers received half its funding from the Commission for Children and Families. It granted approximately $12,000 a year; with $15,000 to $18,000 obtained through private funds.

"I will be leaving the program before school starts again," said Toler. "It's looking like it will be a mix of tuition and grants that will fund continuation of the program. Parents will likely have to pay some amount to keep their kids in the program."

So far, children who have never been to Dome School or heard of it have been able to make it their after-school home too.

"I still think they (Dome School) plan on making the Rangers available for anyone who wants to attend. If your child goes to Dome School, you already paid tuition, which will include the Rangers program," said Toler.

For those not attending the school, the extra fee (if implemented) to participate in the program may be more than some can afford.

"By investing in this program, we are contributing to a healthier, safer community for our children," said Toler. "I'm proud of what we have established with the Rangers. I hope, and have confidence that Dome School staff will be able to carry (the program) forth."

To enroll, phone Toler at 592-3911.
