Prosecution time limit extended for sex crimes

The Oregon House of Representatives has passed legislation authored by House Speaker Karen Minnis (R-Wood Village) that extends the statute of limitations for prosecution of sex crimes against children.

House Bill 2015 extends the statute of limitations for such crimes to either the child's 30th birthday or within 12 years of being reported to a law enforcement agency.

The bill extends the statute of limitation for the following felonies: criminal mistreatment; first-, second-, and third-degree rape and sodomy; and first- and second-degree unlawful sexual penetration and sexual abuse.

Also, using a child in display of sexual conduct; encouraging child sexual abuse; incest; promoting prostitution; and compelling prostitution.

Currently, the statute of limitations to prosecute the preceding crimes runs out either at the victim's 24th birthday or within six years of being reported to a law enforcement agency.
