

Reducing death cost aim of bill

Dying in Oregon could become a bit more financially trouble-free with the 38-19 passage of House Bill 2629 by the full Oregon House of Representatives.

The action came on the heels of passage of the measure by the House Revenue Committee.

“We have a nice momentum going into the Senate, and if it can act with the same speed as the House and put this bill on the governor’s desk, then a big worry will be off the minds of thousands of surviving family members of Main Street business owners and family farmers,” said J.L. Wilson, one of the lead lobbyists for HB 2629 and state director for the 12,000-member Oregon arm of the National Federation of Independent Business.

Officially known as the estate tax, it is more accurately called the death tax by survivors of family members who worked all their lives to bequeath something to their loved ones, said Wilson.

If it becomes law, House Bill 2629 would boost state death-tax exemptions from $1 million in 2006 to $2 million in 2007, and in doing so not only bring it in line with the federal tax exemption, but also make it a full deduction.

Currently an estate valued at $950,000 is exempt from Oregon death taxes, but should the property be worth $951,000, then the tax is levied on the entire amount.

In raising the exemption to $2 million, HB 2629 would levy the death tax beginning with the first dollar after the $2 million, not the entire amount. During 2001, Congress abolished the federal death tax for 10 years. Unless it votes for permanent repeal, it will be reinstated in its entirety on Jan. 1, 2011.
