Walden highlights anti-meth battle

On the heels of House passage of more than $80 million in additional funding for the fight against methamphetamine in the House version of funding bills for fiscal year 2006, U.S. Congressman Greg Walden (R-Ore.), issued a statement.

Said Walden, a member of the bipartisan Congressional Caucus to Fight and Control Methamphetamine:

"Three of the most important messages that came out of the meth forums I held around our district were to make sure that law enforcement had the resources they needed to fight meth, that we did more with international interdiction to prevent bulk meth from coming into this country.

"And third, to make sure we had the help for our High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area teams in central and So. Oregon."

"The votes have upped the funding for all three of those categories, which I think will help with our war on methamphetamine. This is a big problem, and we are stepping up to do the right thing."

Walden cast the latest in a series of votes to increase federal investments to fight the meth epidemic over levels established by the Appropriations Committee.

He supported a $9 million increase in funding for the High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA) program, which provides funding to targeted counties known to have an extreme meth distribution and trafficking problem. Oregon has seven HIDTA counties; Jackson and Deschutes counties are the two in Oregon's 2nd Congressional District.

In total, the House has voted to increase meth funding by more than $80 million during recent consideration of funding bills. In addition to the $9 million added to the HIDTA program, a total of $62 million was added to the Community Oriented Policing program and Byrne Memorial Grant program. Both provide critical funds to local law enforcement, treatment professionals and prevention organizations battling meth on the frontlines every day,.

And an additional $10 million was sent to the Drug Enforcement Agency for its work to curb the international trafficking of meth and its precursor ingredients such as pseudoephedrine.

"The epidemic we have faced in rural Oregon for a long while is becoming a reality in many areas -- urban and rural -- across the country, and it is an alarming reality," said Walden.

Walden has been an active leader in the Congress on efforts to combat meth, which is especially prevalent in rural communities.

He added, "I recognize the importance of maintaining convenient access to useful medications for consumers, but given the enormous threat our communities face with the production of meth across the nation, we must make it a priority to limit access to precursor ingredients nationwide."

Walden is co-sponsor of HR 314 to make pseudoephedrine a Schedule V drug, requiring behind-the-counter sale nationwide.

The Senate will now take action on its version of the various funding bills, and the two chambers will come together in a conference committee to iron out differences between them.
