During World War II, Ellis Island in New York Harbor was a detention center for illegal or criminal aliens already in the United States. The U.S. Coast Guard also trained recruits there. Following the war, fewer people were detained, and the facility was closed in 1954. New Jersey has sovereignty over most of Ellis Island.

Looking good for summer water

Winter weather during the past few weeks -- with lots of rain and fairly good snowfall in the mountains -- has produced a fast start for Oregon's water picture.

That's good news for Oregon agriculture, which depends on a strong winter snowpack for irrigation during the summer months, said Oregon Dept. of Agriculture (ODA).

However, all forecasters agree -- despite the good start, it's way too early to predict how much water will be available during the growing season of 2007, ODA reported.
