A Look Back This Week

On June 21, 1787, New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify the Constitution ... June 18, 1778, the British evacuated Philadelphia ... June 18, 1812, Congress declared war on Great Britain ... June 22, 1937, Joe Louis knocked out James J. Braddock and became the world heavyweight champion ... June 22, 1944, the G. I. Bill of Rights was signed, providing benefits for veterans ... June 21, 1945, U.S. forces captured Okinawa ... June 20, 1947, the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, curbing strikes, was vetoed by President Truman, but Congress overrode the veto ... June 23, 1948, the U.S.S.R. halted all surface traffic into West Berlin; in response, U.S. and British troops launched an airlift ... June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted of conspiracy to commit wartime espionage, were executed ... June 22, 1964, three civil rights workers were reported missing in Mississippi ... June 18, 1983, Sally Ride became the first American woman to travel in space when the space shuttle “Challenger” was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. June 20, 2001, Andrea Yates was arrested in Houston, Texas, in the drowning deaths of her five children ... June 21, 2005, Edgar Ray Killen, 80, a former Ku Klux Klan member, was found guilty of manslaughter in the deaths of three civil rights workers murdered in Mississippi 41 years earlier ... June 22, 2005, The “New York Times” quoted from a CIA report concluding that Iraq was now a training ground for Islamic fighters ... June 23, 2005, in a case involving municipal use of eminent domain for private development, Kelo vs. City of New London, the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that the city of New London, Conn., could use the power of eminent domain to take, with compensation to the owners, private property along the Thames River so that private developers could build office space and a hotel.

Young gamblers likely have other risky behaviors: ODHS

New correlations from the 2006 Oregon Healthy Teens Survey indicate that eighth- and 11th-grade students who gamble also are more likely to be involved in other risky behaviors.

“The data are startling, showing that students who gamble are more likely to have had sexual intercourse, consumed alcohol, carried a handgun, been in a fight or attacked someone with an intent to hurt them seriously,” said Jeff Marotta, manager of Problem Gambling Services in the Oregon Dept. of Human Services (ODHS). Marotta said that the data bolster plans to produce a seven-minute video, which likely will be available in April. It will be distributed free to schools, boys and girls clubs, faith organizations, and other sites to encourage youth discussions of problem gambling.

The video will feature Oregon middle school students talking about gambling, and will be accompanied by activity and discussion guides.

“The video will focus discussion that will help teen-agers understand how to avoid getting into trouble with gambling,” Marotta said.

These were among correlations in the survey data:

*Sexual intercourse: Eighth-grade gamblers were nearly twice as likely to have had sex as non-gamblers. The difference for 11th-grade gamblers was approximately 25 percent.

*Handguns: Gamblers at both grade levels were three times as likely to have carried a handgun as non-gamblers.

*Physical fights: Eighth-grade gamblers were more than three times as likely to have been in a fight during the prior 12 months, while 11th-graders were more than twice as likely to have been in fights.

*Attacks: Gamblers at both grade levels were nearly three times as likely as nongamblers to have attacked someone during the prior 12 months with an intent to seriously hurt the other person.

*Alcohol: Eighth-grade gamblers were nearly twice as likely to have consumed alcohol, and 11th-graders approximately a third more likely than nongamblers.

“This isn't a cause-and-effect relationship,” Marotta said. “Gambling doesn't cause these other behaviors. But gambling should be a signal to parents that they ought to be talking to teens about risky behaviors including gambling.

“Parents and schools warn about such things as tobacco, alcohol and other drugs, and too often gambling is viewed as a healthy alternative. That isn't necessarily so.”

The DHS problem gambling services program, which also offers free treatment, is financed by 1 percent of Oregon Lottery revenues and is among DHS services to prevent and treat addictions. For more information about problem gambling treatment, phone toll-free to (877) 278-6766.
