

Natural History Adventures in and around the Klamath-Siskiyou

Hiking ~ Birding ~ Rafting ~
Botanizing ~ And more!

Join the Siskiyou Field Institute (SFI) and explore southern Oregon and northwest California's most beautiful places with expert naturalists and guides.

- ~Single and multi-day programs for people ages 6-80
- ~Designed for the recreation seeker, hobby naturalist, or professional
- ~Programs all around the bioregion!

Located at Deer Creek Center, a stunning 850 acre property with lodging facilities near Selma, Oregon.

Call (541) 597-8530, or go to www.thesfi.org.

Home to the densest concentration of Wild and Scenic Rivers in the west, our blue-green sparkling waters are an important haven to salmon, as well as whitewater enthusiasts, fisherman and visitors seeking cool relief from the summer sun. And our dense and varied forests provide a different kind of respite through the year as people relax under the forest canopy, protected from both rain and sun.

The Klamath-Siskiyou mountains, which stretch from Redding, Calif. all the way up to Roseburg, Ore. and generally east from the coast to the Cascade Range, are also a compelling puzzle for scientists. Two of the Earth's plates collide here and have created a jumbled, complex geology that gives rise to steep, rugged mountains with a unique diversity of plant species and habitats.

Hence the rugged, unique and varied wild places you find here. As you drive Hwy. 199

Continued on page 30