

Forest visitors urged to beware wildfire danger

The Keep Oregon Green Association cautions Oregonians to use extreme caution when visiting forests this season:

“Although it seems as though it should still be wet enough to eliminate fire danger, 45 human-caused wildfires already have been fought and suppressed by Oregon firefighters.

“Many Oregonians love the great outdoors, and no matter what the recreational activity, sitting around a campfire is one of the special times we all enjoy.

“During the 2009 wildfire season, however, 116 escaped or abandoned campfires burned more than 200 acres on state and private land. Here's what you can do to avoid causing Oregon's next wildfire:

“If fires are allowed where you will be camping, and you choose an undeveloped campground, here are a few suggestions to ensure that your campfires will be safe.

*When selecting a site for a campfire, avoid areas near buildings, fallen trees, tree trunks, or low overhanging branches.

*Scrape all leaves and litter away down to bare earth for at least 5 feet on all sides of the fire. Dig a pit in the center of this circle and surround it with rocks.

*Build your campfire downwind and at a safe distance from your tent. Never leave it unattended, and after you light it, throw your match into the fire. If any sparks escape the campfire, have a shovel or rake handy to suppress them.

“When it's time to leave the campfire and head to bed or back to town, make sure you put the campfire out -- Dead out.

Drown all embers, sticks, and coals, especially those that might have fallen under the rocks.

Stir the coals to make sure that all heat has been removed.

Drown the area again. “Remember that wildfire prevention is your individual responsibility. Be alert to weather conditions, especially wind; and always be careful with fire.

“Leave your fireworks home -- they don't belong in the forests.”

IS IT EDIBLE? - What appears to be a Western Gray Squirrel was entranced perhaps either by the promise of food from a picnic lunch, or by seeing his reflection in the camera lens wielded by Anno Bakker, of Holland. Bakker and his wife, Jo, were hosted by Cave Junction residents Jack & Valerie Brown last week at Oregon Caves National Monument. The Browns met the couple during a recent trip to Holland, and their overseas friends came to visit during their motorhome tour of the western U.S. (Photo by Valerie Brown)

Obituaries

Joanie Elaine Hardie

Selma resident Joanie Elaine Hardie, 69, died June 17, 2010 in Grants Pass.

Joan Hardie

No service is planned at this time. In lieu of flowers, please send donations to the Selma Community Center & Library, P.O. Box 844, Selma OR 97538.

Joan was born in Merced, Calif., and raised in Yuba City, Calif. Her father, Stanley Edward Durand, died young. Her mother, Christine Francis Oneto, and dad, Ron Leick, reside in Yuba City.

In 1977, Joan and her husband, Wally, designed and built their family home in Grass Valley, Calif. They retired to Selma in 2001.

Joan, a lover of the outdoors, was an avid gardener specializing in floral and ornate plant gardens. She was a lifelong respected horse woman, artist and historian.

Joan camped and rode extensively throughout the Sierra Nevada consulting with many experts. She was a dedicated volunteer throughout her life. She worked the Tevis Cup Ride, an endurance horse race, and was a member of NATRC, competing in many rides and rodeos.

Joan was a member of Gold Country Trails with which she helped build and maintain trails and horse camps including improvements of The Pacific Crest Trail. As a Trails West and OCTA member, she helped mark all Overland Pioneer Trails from Idaho through California and Oregon.

Joan had been the president of the Selma Center, a member of Illinois Valley Garden Club, and volunteered at the I.V. Senior Center.

Joan was proceeded in death by her husband of 35 years, Wally Hardie, and a sister, Patty Rushing. She is survived by “sisters of her heart” Ellen Lovett, of Selma; Barbara Davis, of Grass Valley; and Carol Burgin, of Gresham, Ore.; two brothers: David Durand, of Los Banos, Calif., and Lon Durand, of Houston, Texas; children Gina Oneto, of Cave Junction; Michelle Chastain, of Selma and Yuba City; Lisa Duggins, of Penn Valley, Calif. and son, Reed Lukins, of Baxter, Calif.; and grandchildren Amanda, Tachelle, Crystal, Amoreena, Bobby, Abraham, Mariah and Sierra; and great-grand children Joey, Jayden and Jersey.

Church News

Good Shepherd Lutheran Church

In Luke 10, we read that Jesus chose 70 followers to spread the word of God. Jesus told them to cure the sick where they were welcomed.

If not welcomed, they were to say publicly that even the dust on their feet would be wiped in protest against them, and, “Yet know this: the kingdom of God has come near.”

Also, “Whoever listens to you listens to me, and whoever rejects you rejects me, and whoever rejects me rejects the one who sent me.”

So it is for us. We are God's representatives, charged with spreading His word.

Calendar: Thursday, July 8, 4 p.m., Good Shepherd Singers rehearse; Sunday, July 11, 9:15 a.m. all-comers Sunday School followed by worship and Communion.
