Since the early 90’s the internet has dramatically changed people’s lives and allowed many to work at home. Other services for health care like naturopathy, massage therapy and acupuncture have thrived since 2006, in the old Takilma Clinic building, as a new generation of practitioners is working at the healing center again. Dr. Margaret, a naturopath, set up shop there shortly after moving to Cedar Gulch from Washington. She is joined by Louisa and Karen who do acupuncture and other healing arts. Other people are self employed and provide the services of accountants, tax preparers, nurses, seamstresses, computer technicians and handymen, to name a few.

One resident, Paula, learned to bake exceptional Danish pastries and makes a good living selling her goodies all around the Valley. Another great baker, Kate D. is a first class chef and bakes scrumptious goodies and caters for large events from her home in Takilma. As if that were not enough she has gone on to become a Librarian and was recently elected to the Three Rivers School Board.

The community fortunately has supported a vigorous alternative economy of musicians, artists, farmers and craftsmen. This has encouraged new growth in the bridge between Takilma and Cave Junction, in which people are sharing their art and making their town a better and more vibrant place to enjoy. Artists like Mark and Beth make baskets from local trees, Dudley sculpts from local wood, Dave K. blows glass art, Libby weaves with natural yarns, Paco makes buttons, Marjorie sculpts and makes silver jewelry and Delbert makes pole and burl furniture, to name a few. Along that same line, Marjorie’s straw-bale house looks like a work of art, and received an award from Josephine County for being the best alternative design. Marjorie can often be heard playing her flute around the Valley.

Author Kindi Fahrnkopf is a poet and flower child of the 60s who has lived in Takilma for 33 years. She moved to Cave Junction in 1979 with her husband and two little children to open the Cave’s Cobbler shoe repair and Birkenstock shop.

Both Roth and Carlson mentioned how phosphorus and nitrogen bearing pesticides and fertilizers used near the lake by residents and agricultural operations combine with chemicals draining downhill from logging operations, road-side weed-spraying and leakage from septic tanks. All these substances make their way into the water table and drain into the lake, contributing to what many experts call a “toxic cocktail.”

Natural plant decomposition processes and fish and animal wastes combine with this toxic cocktail in the lake and the end result is oxygen depletion that favors algae growth, weeds and non-native plants that do well in a high-nutrient low-oxygen environment.

Residents in the area also note how there are more and more boats each year, and say that while some are small fishing boats with four-horsepower motors, other large boats have outboard motors at 120 horsepower or more. Sometimes these big engines, like on pontoon boats, idle on the lake half the afternoon, with their exhaust spraying onto the water’s surface.

“Motorized boats are supposed to be cleaned and have a five mile-per-hour speed limit,” Carlson said. “But the fuels do contribute to the problem.”

Colin Clark, who owns the Lake Selmac Resort and rents boats to the public, uses only electric engines.

“I don’t put gas into the lake,” Clark said. “It’d be nice to have only electric, paddle and sailboats out here.”

Heck added that the commissioners are now fielding a lot of phone calls, shutting down rumors, for example, that county residents could face steep fines if their grass is too long.

“We’re having to constantly wrestle through the consequences of a fundamental distrust of anybody in government authority,” Heck said of ordinance opponents. “And that takes valuable time away from trying to focus on the real and serious work that needs to be done for the county.”

“Fresno is flat, hot and dirty,” Robert states emphatically. “I figured I could take my sign business anywhere, so we moved here for the weather and the scenery.”

Even with three businesses, there’s still room available in the feed store for craft booths. One space is already taken up with handmade decorator dolls. Vendors can choose from a 10-foot by 10-foot space which rents for $125 a month or a 10-foot by 20-foot booth for $250 a month.

“The beauty of it for the vendors is that they don’t have to spend time trying to sell their work,” Robert said. “We sell the products for them.”

They’re also considering offering booth rentals outside for a flea market in the covered alley between the barn and warehouse.

The venue will host the July 12, I.V. Chamber business mixer, concurrently with hosting the Second Friday ArtWalk Featured Artist from 5 to 8 p.m. Cheryl Williams Dolan will exhibit her acrylic landscapes in a show titled “Explore Our World,” and the Sam Soul Trio featuring Motel Jones will play under the awning.

Store hours are Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. They are closed Sunday and Monday. The phone number is 541-415-5379.
