Many of the bill's supporters acknowledge that while there are ample opposing views regarding medical marijuana from Oregon's cities and counties, most still agree that something needed to be done to ensure that medical marijuana is made available to patients in a responsible manner.

Just last week, a senate committee modified the bill to address concerns raised by some district attorneys around the state who initially opposed the bill.

One key change is that the bill now restricts people convicted of certain drug crimes from running a medical marijuana dispensary.
