A Lions Club Community Project

“There’s still a chance that it won’t be approved because there’s a lot of competition with other disasters around the nation; namely a lot flooding in California then there’s a hurricane as well,” Brandt added. However, the IVSWCD has backup plans if the funding isn’t approved but those plans will take longer, be more complicated, and generally take more work to put into effect. “We’re really hopeful that the money will come through and we’re really glad to be able to do these important projects in the community where landowners would otherwise be on their own,” Brandt concluded.

In the meantime, the IVSWCD is going to do as much prework as they can because once the funding is approved they have 220 days to complete all the projects which will have to be done one at a time. At this time the IVSWCD isn’t sure which project will be first in line but generally the most urgent project takes priority. According to Brandt, all work will be done by local contractors who will be notified publically when the IVSWCD is ready to start taking bids.

FAIR . . .

The IVcanDo decided to sponsor this event because it led the I.V. community in the process of writing the 20/20 Strategic Plan and found that public safety was residents’ number one priority.

According to Kate Dwyer IVcanDO’s community development coordinator, “Public Safety is more than law enforcement, it includes emergency preparedness. This winter demonstrated how many of our neighbors are vulnerable to disruption of services and need us to organize our systems for helping each other. It takes only a small emergency to point out how much we rely on each other. IVcanDO is pleased to help people get the skills and systems in place to help their neighbors in adversity.”

Dwyer hopes that participants in the Prepare Fair gain “a better understanding of the comprehensive mapping tools online through Josephine County that we can use to know who our neighbors are and to get phone numbers and meet people so that if we need help we know each other better.”

One of CERT’s goals is to help citizens anticipate and prepare for the kinds of emergencies that can happen in the Valley, such as loss of power, loss of communication lines, wildfires, structure failures like roads and bridges due to earthquake, flooding or snow. The CERT group is also looking for active interested residents to volunteer to join and train with them.
