WHERE ...

"We know the fiscal conservatives don't want the levy. And there's folks here who have a general cultural aversion to law enforcement; and of course, illegal growers like the lack of law enforcement," Evans said. "But now, our community's become criminally dominated, so these attitudes are like shooting oneself in the foot."

But Evans and others will keep trying. "We plan to institute the Illinois Valley Community Watch and Public Safety Support Outreach campaign - regardless of the whether the levy passes or not," he said. "The effort requires community input, education, organization of concerned residents and dedicated participation." Evans said CJ Patrol is organizing with Hoke, who also serves as Idlewild Watch coordinator; Guenter Ambron, Ken Rose Watch coordinator; and other community leaders and neighborhood watch captains, to establish a Valleywide network of neighborhood watches.

The kick-off meeting for this effort will take place at Wild River Brewing and Pizza, Thursday, May 4, at 6:30 p.m. The groups' goal is to recruit at least one representative from every street and road in the Valley who is willing to allow CJ Patrol to help them organize a community watch effort in their area.

"But all this planning won't make much difference if people do not participate," Evans said. "This community has to decide if it is going to be haven of lawlessness, or if good people are going to take their home back from the criminal element."
