

The Archive Zone:

What do you get when you mix together a roasting pig, intoxication, a peeping tomboy, timber rustling and a heavy breather? The answer: this week's Police Blotter Archive Zone. The Date: August 12, 1992. Location: Cave Junction and the Illinois Valley.

Friday, July 31

*A man in Grants Pass was cooking a pig outside and was doing so safely, even though someone reported open flame from a barbecue pit.

Saturday, Aug. 1

*At 7:09 p.m. a very intoxicated woman phoned from a CJ bar, asking that a deputy stand by while she obtained food for her and her child.

Sunday, Aug. 2

*At 46 past midnight a man phoned and said he wanted to commit suicide. A deputy went to the phone booth, found the caller had a cut finger and took him home.

Monday, Aug. 3

*There was some situation on South Old Stage Road involving a man with heavy breathing and a phone number that used to be his father's. *Outside a CJ service station at 7:58 a.m. a man was "raising Cain." He was advised about criminal trespass and told to never return. *Possible timber rustling was reported on Caves Highway.

Tuesday, Aug. 4

*A man with a crossbow on a bicycle wasn't aiming at people, it was found after a complaint that he was. *A girl was watching a boy undress, according to an anonymous woman. The address couldn't be located. *Someone dialed 911 because neighbors wouldn't turn off their water.

Friday, Aug. 7

*After a report that a blue aircraft nearly struck their house on Smith Sawyer Road the craft was located at I.V. Airport.

Sunday, Aug. 9

*After a man's car broke down, he was concerned because someone was following him and his friends. It turned out to be the tow truck driver, who needed some information. *On Millie Street a complainant said a man often screams and hits his wife and children.

Police say woman killed husband for name calling

According to a release from the Oregon State Police (OSP), Cave Junction resident Eric Atcher, 55, was found dead in his backyard the evening of Aug. 2, with a wound on the inside of his upper left arm. Upon investigation it was found his wife, Valerie Atcher stabbed her husband with a knife because he was calling her names.

Atcher has been charged with first-degree manslaughter.

Due to changes in state law with House Bill 2198 and Senate Bill 1057, growers will be required to notify the OLCC and Oregon Health Authority (OHA) if they will remain with OMMP or will be transitioning to OLCC by Dec. 1. Should regulation follow through in Josephine County, transferring to the OLCC will not be an option on RR land. Because of further changes, medical operations that wish to stay with the OMMP can cultivate no more than 12 plants or for more than two patients, much less than what they've been able to grow in the past.

According to Julie Schmelzer, Josephine County community development director, growers will likely have a good idea whether or not their operation will be prohibited at the county level by the end of December and therefore should know whether or not to invest in another growing season. Should a grower fail to notify the OHA and the OLCC of their intentions for the season it will result in their OMMP registration not being renewed.

The next step for this order is that it has to go through a planning commission hearing where it will be accepted as written, with amendments or rejected entirely. The hearing is scheduled to be Aug. 28 at 6 p.m. at the Anne Basker Auditorium in Grants Pass.

"This is going to be a messy process," County Commissioner Simon Hare said, "Everybody should have known when 91 passed that we weren't going to get it right first out of the gate." Hare added that Josephine County doesn't have much of an example to follow in other counties because he is unaware of any other county in Oregon that has to deal with cannabis production in RR areas to the extent that it's going on here.

At this time, there has been no discussion as to whether existing operations on RR properties will be grandfathered.

"All we're doing today is initiating the process," Hare said, "That's it. It doesn't mean it is actually even going to happen."

In total, only about 46 percent of eligible voters took part in the special election ballot that sparked the drafting of 2017-034. According to Peter Gendron, president of the Oregon Sun Grower's Guild, half of that number, live in Grants Pass and in his mind should have little to no influence over what happens in RR zones all over the county.

The Cave Junction Farmers' Market Board of Directors expressed in a press release to the Illinois Valley News their collective disapproval of the order and held that it will cause immense economic harm to the area without any substantial benefit. "This order will put many businesses at risk to lose their entire investments they and their investors had every reason to believe were safe."
