Tacitus Ryland Arbuckle

The Plaques of E Clampus Vitus-- Humbug Chapter No. 73

The 15th in a continuing series of articles prepared by Bill Wensrich.

"If you ain't plaque'n, then you ain't Clampin'."

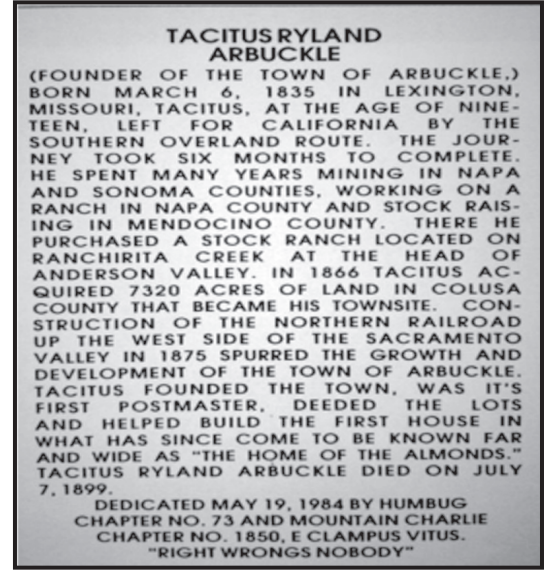

This historical plaque is placed on the grave of Tacitus Ryland Arbuckle. Often E Clampus Vitus (ECV) Chapters partner in the cost and erection of historical monuments. ECV's Yreka Humbug Chapter and the Mountain Charlie Chapter out of San Jose partnered together to place this plaque. The plaque is not easy to access because the grave site is on private property near Callahan, California. Located on a hillside off of East Side Road near 8020 E. Callahan Road, you cannot view the plaque without first gaining permission from the property owner.

Back in the '80s when the grave site was plaqued, Humbug Chapter had access to an old school bus. They used that vehicle to transport participating Redshirts (ECV) to plaque dedications and the Clampsite where the weekend Doin's was held.

The news of gold in California lured young Tacitus Arbuckle west. He did mining on the Russian River without much success and also tried his luck in the silver fields of Virginia City, Nevada. At age 20 he married Amada Mevina Tinker. Fourteen children later found the couple in Colusa County, California where they increased their land holdings from a quarter-section to over 7,000 acres. Learning the railroad was coming, Tacitus offered some of his land for a railroad depot and provided free nails to anyone who would buy a lot from him and build a home. As a result, the town of Arbuckle, California was established in 1875. Following a major fire that destroyed most of the buildings he owned, Tacitus fell into financial ruin. He packed up what he could and moved to a ranch just above Callahan in Siskiyou County's Scott Valley. Buried on a hillside above the old ranch his gravesite provides a glimpse of the old Oregon Trail, a route he traveled as he pioneered west.
