Western Folklife Center Announces Winners of Next Generation Poetry Competition on YouTube

The Western Folklife Center and its 31st National Cowboy Poetry Gathering today announced the winners of the 2nd annual spoken word poetry competition on YouTube for poets ages 18-35. Expressing the Rural West: Poetry of the Next Generation is an ongoing effort to discover new artists who are carrying on the tradition of rural and cowboy poetry in the West. For the second year, aspiring poets from 17 western states were invited to film themselves reciting an original poem and upload it to YouTube.

Cheyenne Greub, from Buffalo, Wyo., is the winner of the juried competition. Her poem, "As the Master Turns the Page," is about living in Wyoming and working on a ranch.

Jolyn Young is the winner of the audience award. Her poem, "So You Wanna Marry a Buckaroo?" received the most thumbs up on YouTube. Jolyn lives on the RO Ranch between Austin and Tonopah in central Nevada, where her husband cowboys for a living.

Adopt a Friend!

My name is Marbles and I am about a year old and am looking for a forever home. I am a spayed female and have been tested for FIV and am negative. I am current on my vaccinations and was declared healthy by my veterinarian. I have medium length dark gray and white hair and some unusual marks on my head and face. I am in indoor/outdoor cat, but prefer the indoors where it is warm and cozy. I am litter trained and well behaved in the house. I also live with two other cats and one very old dog. I love to be on my owner's lap which causes jealousy from the other two cats in the house, so they want me to find a new home where I can be loved and petted all the time. Please call Carmen at 541-519-4530 or Best Friends of Baker at 541-519-7387 for more information about adopting me.
