

LOOKING FOR A FEW LOUD VOICES

By Harvey Boyle

Want to help the cheerleaders rock the gym during basketball? The cheerleaders, Melissa Hamilton, Lindsay Stockton, Jade Torres, and Jackie Lyon, need your voices in the stands.

They are putting together a book of cheers so the rooters can follow along, and they are selling green logo polo shirts, suitable for team support. They hope to gather a lot of the raucous faithful in an area of the bleachers to combine colors and voices to cheer the teams on to success.

If you want to join them, see Melissa, at the high school, for a shirt. They cost $16 and make a nice dressy shirt suitable for nearly any occasion. The next step is to show up, sit together with the other fans, and follow along with the cheerleaders.

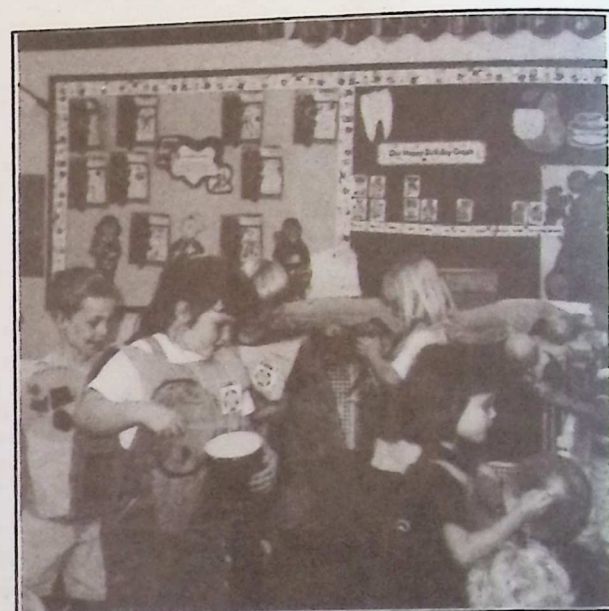

Wendy McClelland, Jessica Dunlap and Jade Torres with Baby Think-It-Over, the life-like doll that cries and keeps a record of how it is cared for. Baby is used by students in the health classes at the high school to simulate the responsibilities associated with having a baby.

HONOR SOCIETY

By Carla LeFever

This group will be committing numerous Random Acts of Kindness throughout the year, so be prepared for moments of wonderment. Community Service has become the number one priority for these inspirational and capable students. For instance, many members have volunteered to don costumes and be responsible for accompanying young ones in need of chaperones for Halloween evening. They will also be Santa's crafty helpers on November 20th at the Community Hall. Gloria Karches of the Lioness Club has many wonderful crafty gifts for the young members of our community to create, and the Honor Society members will be there to lend their support.

MARCHING BAND

Members of Mrs. McNeil's kindergarten class put on their first public performance on October 1. Nine students marched in line around their classroom playing instruments and showing off big smiles. Following the musical presentation family and friends were treated to a demonstration of some of the youngsters new knowledge. The children took turns introducing themselves to the audience and told about some of their favorite foods and animals. The group concluded their presentation by singing songs that focused on the letters A through D and the numbers 1 through 9.
