

Halloween Adventures
by Rob Miller

This month I decided to do a Halloween adventure column. There were some movies that I have chosen to write about. "Arachnophobia" was a movie that I saw with my step-dad and sister. It was so freaky that college students had their feet up in their seats. Me and my step-dad had our feet firmly planted on the floor. That was a bad idea, when we got out our feet were covered in pop from the people behind us spilling it in fright. It was a good movie overall. I give it a three pumpkin rating.

"Hocus Pocus" was another good movie. This movie is more suitable for kids. It is about three sisters that happen to be Medieval witches. They were killed for witchcraft. A boy brought them back to life by lighting a magical candle. This was a good movie packed with laughter. I give it a four pumpkin rating.

Some other movies that I recommend for little kids: this name will deceive you, "The Nightmare Before Christmas". "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" (headless horseman).

Now for some frightful movies for adolescents. Any of the "Friday the Thirteenth" movies (Jason). Also a funny yet freaky movie is "Return of the Living Dead".

This month, since it is Halloween and all, I will tell you the top ten of what kids want for candy.

Nowadays costumes usually are of killers or celebrities. But still people like to sport old fashioned costumes such as Dracula, Witches, etc. Open minded people like to dress up as the opposite sex. Now for my top ten costumes.

10. Cowboy
9. Clown
8. Werewolf
7. Devil
6. Nancy Kerrigan
5. Tonya Harding
4. Madonna
3. O.J. Simpson
2. Witch
1. Dracula
