Bunny Doar
Candidate for County Commission

Biographical: Born and brought up in Portland, OR (no zip codes at that time) and attended Kerns Grammar School and Washington High School there, graduating at the advanced age of 16. (Got to be 17 a few weeks later, though.)

After a year out to recoup the family finances, went on to Reed College, where graduated in 1937 with BA degree in Psychology.

Started working for a living (or at least spending money) as a junior in high school, correcting papers for my teachers. Kept this up for years, at first at 35¢/hr., later raised to 40¢/hr. It was a living wage (barely) in those days.

During and after college did all the things kids do as temporary expedients: washing dishes, waiting on a lunch counter, running a switchboard, a trifle of work for the NYA (a New Deal program for youth) and, what is less common, learned to be an expert overall presser in a commercial laundry.

However, my life work has been in word-mongering. Not surprising as my mother was a commercial writer all her life, specializing in juvenile stories, articles, poems for the 9-12 set.

I went to work for a Portland radio station, writing copy for shows and commercials. Went from there to being an "information specialist" (flack) for the Farm Security Administration. Went on to Wash. D.C., where spent four years writing ad copy for an agency that specialized in radio shows. Wrote some of the shows, too.

Spent summers at the beach in Gearhart from 1928 on, and ultimately returned here permanently in 1948, where I free-lanced for a while. Then went to work for the Seaside Signal as "social editor" (bridge clubs, lodges, weddings, chit-chat, three-line personals, funerals, and often real news copy). Also wrote the "bottom of the column" editorial (the one on weather, tourists, my cat, etc.) Wrote all the copy for the "Vacation News" for tourists about the beauties of Clatsop County.

Took it into my head, after teaching the high-school-paper kids the "printshop" end of the business for several years, to take up teaching. Taught English and journalism for one year, during which I lost 18 lbs., most of my friends, all of the temper and most of my sanity. So went back to the paper. Was copy editor, typesetter, engraver (a breadboard zinc etching set) and finally darkroom tech. I went with the Signal from the days of handset headlines to the days of cold type and elementary computers. Also handled the subscription dept. and classified billing. (Also floors swept cheap.) Liked it alot, as always something new to learn.

Retired in 1977, but still do darkroom work occasionally when needed for vacations, etc.

Why I am running for county commission.

Some friends twisted my arm a good deal. They pointed out that I had served two years on the county budget committee, thus had some continuity in that area. Also that it was my civic duty.

I have been saying for years that it is necessary, in our form of government, for people to think that it is not "the government They" but "the government WE." This is the basis of democracy and without this mind-set it will not work.

The county commission is a policy-setting body. That is its job -- or the first half of it. The other half is to see that the policies are carried out. This does not mean micro-managing, to use a popular buzz word. But it does mean knowing what's going on and correcting it if it isn't right.

Commissioners should listen to what people tell them about what said people want. Then they should make up their minds whether the suggested ideas are feasible, meritorious, financially sound and legal. If the suggestions fail on these points, they should be discarded -- with a courteous explanation.

During my service on the budget committee, I came up with the idea of buying up and retiring in as brief a period as possible, the bonds for the new fairgrounds. The notion found favor with the rest of the committee, then with the commissioners, and was found feasible by the county legal and financial experts. Since the bonds had already been approved by the voters, their assent could be taken as assured. The scheme was approved, and will save the taxpayers about $800,000 in interest in the next several years.

This is a hard act to follow. I might never have another idea as good. But it shows some common sense, some imagination. And some devotion to the good of the taxpayers.

That is all I have to offer.

However you might feel about the Bill of Rights and the Constitution, they make you a beneficiary in perpetuity in principles, ideals, and they place an obligation on you.
