No, we don't know what happen to Rory & Mar either. Maybe the rains, maybe the poor Post Office Holiday weirdness. But we know they are working on a comic, and moving and stuff, so write them a letter % the Edge, Box 1222, Cannon Beach, Or 97110, and let them know we miss them and love them.

How to Have a Happy New Year

by Rob Mullison

Usually I write about movies and videos. This time I am doing something different. When people talk about playing games we automatically think of Nintendo or Sega, but there are some great games out there that you can play without electronics. When I get together with my aunts and uncles and cousins we play lots of games. Here are some of our favorite ones.

Monopoly is a good game for 10 and up. It can take an hour or more for all the property to be bought so we usually deal out all the cards and then trade as the game goes on.

Risk is another good game for older kids and adults. The object of the game is to conquer the world. You use dice to have wars with your armies. This game has lots of strategy and takes a long time to finish. It can be played with two to six people.

Scrabble is a word game that all ages can play. Be sure you have a dictionary because there can be lots of arguing about words.

Outburst is another game of words, that is played with teams. Little kids and adults can play together and any number can play. One team gives the other team a category and they have one minute to shout out all the things they can think of that fit the category. You get one point for every answer that is on the category card. This is a noisy game but is great for a family.

Some other games that all ages can play together are Oodles, a word game; Jenga, a balancing and building game; and Clue, where you try to solve a mystery.

Hope these ideas will make your holidays more fun. This time of year is good for being with family and friends, so try one of these games this season.
