

Jon Cornelison

enlightenment (early fall)

By Jay Thiemeyer

Berryman and Brecht, dreamsongs and beggars operating in the shadows and on the streets of Atlanta, of Lookout Place, where the buses refused to route, as tho it was Cobb or Clayton counties or DeKalb and Stone Mtn, not Forsyth. Not the city too busy to hate just ignore.

In '85 and for a few years after, I (there's that word again, 'I', the one 'I' was trying to escape) felt alive but could be wrong, only the 100o knew (and it warn't tellin) not that I remember it's ever being wrong when it did tell me where to go or what to do (usually to go cadge more change and another half-pint of blue label Smirnoff to babysit and stir with my numb tongue as I considered dreams and beggars, being some of both if memory serves

Voices

By Dan Newth

For those who hear voices,
Yet no one is there.

The bump in the night,
Then wake-up and stare.

The vague mystic signs point
This way comes delusion.

When the subconscious leaks
Into your waking life.

That corroded barrier
Allows only enough
To see logic displaced.
