

With the success of the City Hall patio food cart program, Mayor Charlie Hales has expanded the idea to the vacant, city-owned lot at MLK Jr. Boulevard and Alberta Street. The lot in North Portland had been considered a prime location for a Trader Joe's grocery store, but the plan was pooh-poohed by residents of the area concerned the grocery store chain was another example of poor planning for the neighborhood. Above, the first of two carts in which is hoped to be a full-blown pod similar to City Hall this summer, has set up shop. Hales is working to lure Trader Joe's back to the site, but in the meantime, he said, the carts will keep the homeless people away. "The people have made it very clear. This should be the people's lot." The tables and chairs, recently removed from City Hall's entrance way, are expected to be set up next week.
