

Haiku

by Maddy Brown-Clark

Summer Moons;
A guitar player's music
Ascends to the sky.

Downtown;
Too many people
Going nowhere.

The cattails;
At the edge of the pond
Standing regally.

A Light Beyond

by Ross Robbins

In Japan the color of mourning is white.
The blinding flash of strangled brain
Festooned above the funeral rout,
All the crepe-stream blank of pigment,
Blank the mind once dying's done.
Maybe find a bit of hope there, thought
Of light beyond alive, not
The blackness promised by
A firm belief in nothing

A Room Of Our Own

by Eileen V.

A room of our own is what I desire for Molly and me.
Where we may find our solace once again, and be free.
Free of hatred, free of people,
free of prejudices, free of incompleteness.
A room of our own where we can grow,
develop, and reunite as one.
A place to hang pictures, and to have our belongings around us again.
A room of our own where we can just be.
