

The Universe: What it Means to Me

by Maddy Brown-Clark

I believe in creation.
I don't believe we just come to be.
Everything is here for a reason.
It was put here by an intelligent being.
If the universe exploded into being,
it was a planned explosion.
It's too orderly for anything else.
Look at all the complicated and superior mathematics of physics.
That's no accident.
Look at how the planets orbit
and the stars shine bright.
Someone caused all of this.
To me it means there is a God.

America's Bird

by Eileen Vizenor

Born dark, fluffy and squawking.
Their majestic parents hunt.
Prey caught with talons quiet babes.
Learning to fly is bumpy.
When instincts inject, soaring's natural.
With maturity, a white head and tail become trade marks.
Born America's bird.
A Bald Eagle, free to soar.

Slick Boots Cover My Feet

by Slow Coyote

Rooftop ninja
night playground romper
patient cool-guy.
Going where, not sure
Being where I'm spontaneously located.

Trashed streets,
free eats.
Always got a place to sleep,
in the air
where its free to breathe.

Pot smoking in all the nooks
with all new friends and all new looks.
We're combining with each shared memory
the memories may never die.
For what you see with your eyes and feel what is right
will etch into your soul for life.

Coloured streets,
bursting with beauty and vibrating harmoniously with sweet smelling flowers.
It's quite easy to be free,
despite the separation from yuppies.

I wish we could all meet.
