Full House

It's a crowded house Friday morning, March 18, as vendors gather in the Street Roots office. The weekly vendor meeting is a time for vendors to talk about their customers, discuss the issues on the streets, and get a rundown of what's in the new edition of Street Roots. On this day Street Roots set the all-time highest sales day ever recorded at the office with vendors buying nearly 4,000 copies in six hours. Thanks to readers, sales of the newspaper have meant more vendors can support themselves and their efforts to secure a pathway to housing and stability. Currently 160 vendors sell Street Roots each week, double from just two years ago.
