

While You Weren't Looking

By Norma Jean Marshall

While you weren't looking, I grew old
 I know that you are shocked, I know
 That you thought
 That I would always be
 Here to love you
 To try to meet your needs
 But
 While you weren't looking, I grew old
 Bad of heart and memory, short
 Of strength, agility.
 Though I still love you, unable to meet your needs.
 I know that it is foolish
 But
 I feel guilty, and ashamed;
 While you weren't looking, I grew old!

Night Falls

By Leo Rhodes

As Night Falls
 I see the last light gleaming in your eyes
 I ponder the time we shared together
 I know your voice will stay with me for hours
 Like a bird chirping in the desert
 As Night Falls
 I look at the beautiful colors in the desert sky behind you
 The colors that amplify your beauty
 Your beauty is so intoxicating
 It seems to take the colors away from the desert sky
 Leaving the sky black and white
 As Night Falls
 It's sad to hear your parting words

In the Beginning

By Daniel Cox

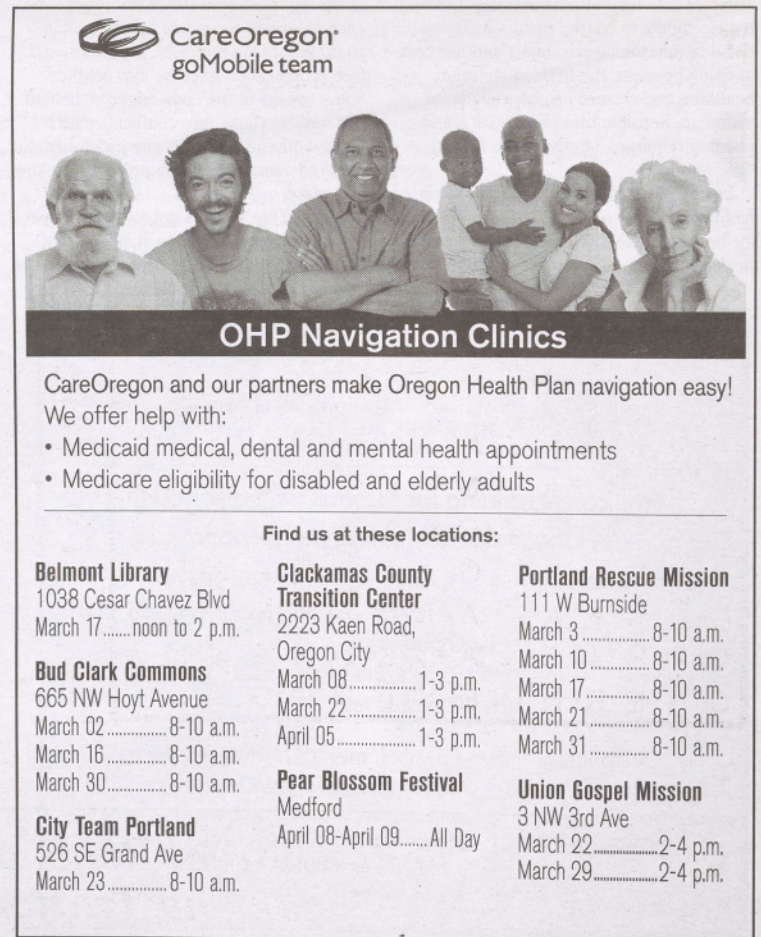

Chasing an endless dream
 That hurts deep down
 This sense of great pain
 You seem to know the right choice,
 But sadly choose the other.
 You emerge from endless sleep
 No sense of who I am, I start
 To examine my body.
 My skin is soft, my hair
 Is long. Then I am aware
 Of a looking glass that reflects
 The image of what I am.
 Facial features are odd.
 For what I gaze upon
 My eyes are bright, but firm
 High cheek bones, my complexion
 Is dark as the things that surround
 Me. Me I become aware of.
 I am and always grateful to my Creator.
