

nomads dream

by j.mccurdy

i am
and always have been
a restless soul

I feel the stars pulling my hair just like the poem said I feel barely contained in the waves breaking against the shore the same way you feel the need to be enclosed in security...

I need to surf
in the energy surrounding my soul
with possibilities
not remaining
where it pools

come play with me
if you dare.

but understand
there cant be
conditions
attached
to the energy we share
or the ecstasy offered
in the moment

realize this
i am a moment to moment
not a decades in the making
girl
so therefore

you can not court me
with the skills you know...

I have no use
for pretty lil words
filled with
fantasies created
by settled souls

I am a nomad
and therefore
can not be contained
by the ordinary

i can no more resist
the call
to roam

then the settled
can resist the
call to stay

be aware of this
feral doesn't mean dangerous it means not domesticated there is a difference

and the difference
could cost you your heart
if your not careful

Ever Lasting Memories

by Leo Rhodes

The love of two becoming one
A night I'll never forget
One interest
While the world goes by
A night to remember
The boardwalk is for lovers

The night was mildly cold
It didn't matter
We had each other
People looked at us
We didn't care
It was the first time we met
But it felt like we had known each other for years Deeply we looked into each other's eyes as we talked Then watched the people as they walked by Most smiled, others looked away All knew what was going on
