

Untitled

by Maddy Brown-Clark

As I rise up from my bed
 I look forward to the day ahead
 Will it be sunny or will there be rain?
 Will I lose or will I gain?
 As I wander along the street
 Will I find some food to eat?
 Will I have a bed tonight?
 Or will I sleep under the moon so bright
 As I stare up at the starry sky
 I know I'm homeless but I wonder why?

Coins from Saturn

by Avendor

I knelt before the altar of summer
 and begged for liberation.
 I held the blue tunic of my lover
 and prayed for peace between the nations.
 I fought for my art and for the downtrodden
 as if I were Muhammad Ali.
 I gathered twigs on the beach at night
 for our campfires by the sea.
 And as I inhaled the fragrance of the trees
 beneath the crescent moon;
 I spilled like a rose over the waterfall
 of subredemptive June
 And as I gather up my belongings
 and go to see the maiden of the tavern;
 I leave her something more than words for survival
 I leave her these coins from Saturn.
