

White horse

by Brian List

Whiter than snow, even whiter than white.
Like a devil from hell, it came out of the night.
Its lines were so perfect, its purity clear,
And with the speed of a stallion, it quickly drew near.
The ride was so beautiful and the rush was a thrill,
And one after the other, I rode over that hill.
My friends tried to tell me, I could quit if I tried
But they never gave my white horse a good ride.
Some said it was easy, that it was simple to stop,
But they never rode my white horse to the top
I've tried to climb off, I really have tried,
And for all of my efforts, I felt like I died.
So don't try to tell me that quitting is swell
Because it's a long way to heaven when you are halfway to hell!

Home

The stillness of the late night - early morning
When all the world sleeps
Impresses itself upon my soul
The sound of silence
Sometimes I think
Is the loudest of all
And I bask in it
And bathe myself in the radiance
Of the void
The nothingness that is everything
Everywhere, it holds the rest together
And it rejuvenates me
As it resonates within my soul
The space between my thoughts
Like a country road covered in
New-fallen snow
Between my destination and origin
I've found my home
