

The Darkness I Hide

by Jaison Kirk

Darkness, in the trees for the murder of crows Cold and damp through my hair the wind blows
 The shadow that appears and runs and dances from my sight
 In the sky the moon is slivered and gives the least of light Intangible and immaterial are the ghosts by my side
 On a sunny day with friends these are my thoughts
 It seems Inside

The Key I See

by Shaggy

Discrimination has no place in any of our conversations The evidence of dissonance is clear in all the time we spend Spreading dirt, which leads to hurt, sticking to us like a shirt Sediments that build a fence, impeding us with bitterness
 The path we need is clear to me, but how do I make others see Each time we celebrate difference is one step closer to lasting bliss.
