

Obscenities

by j. mcurdy

a large house abandoned by life and laughter

life seepin' out someone's soul while they shiverin' on the concrete both of these things are obscene and unnecessary in my mind

Lost in Space

by Jaison Kirk

Back home once on a mountain ridge
Now thoughts of life flow past under a bridge Seeing the roses blossom before they die
The birds in the sky coast and pass by Into the fire, feeling alone among my mates
I cast my life to be decided by the fates Fortitude in the power of my love Faith in he, who is the power above
The white and black playing a game While cooperation makes us the same

Winter Storm Rider

by Jay Plumlee

As a young and older man I would go Up into the hills in the winter
Time to watch the tempests roll through I would be mesmerized
By the force of the tempest as it Rolled by the bay in winter
As I would become immersed in its beauty
As it flowed around me I could be mesmerized throughout Periods of time enjoying the force
As it went through the sheer beauty
It moved me to wonderment that earth Would vanish of the power of the Creator would be flowing through me
There was a serene peace
Where the outside world disappeared Hence a storm rider came into being The secure in peace
