On Wednesday, Sept. 20, more than 20 Street Roots vendors and volunteers went to the zoo for their annual outing. Even a characteristic Oregon autumn downpour couldn't stop the vendors from having an enjoyable afternoon — they spent much of the rain storm in the primate house watching the animals. "I enjoyed walking around and looking at all the animals," said vendor Amy Turco. "It was my first time at the zoo and I had a blast. I definitely want to go back." Street Roots is grateful to the Oregon Zoo for providing annual tickets to the vendors.

Wanderers

by Maddy Brown-Clark

Wandering from city to city
 But always on the street
 Searching for housing
 But qualifications
 Are so hard to meet.
 So the nomads
 Pack up their Cardboard beds
 And hide them
 For the night to come.
 Wanderers forever
 Searching for a home.

Wayward men the lot of us.
 We were lost and did not know it is so.
 The way seems clear to us all,
 But we were tricked into believing a lie.
 The powers of the universe allow it so.
