At times the work of the U. S. enumerators was not all a pleasure picnic. Besides calling, perhaps, a half dozen times on our family before getting to see the proper person of whom to gain correct information, there were other incidents which made the work of enumeration no light task. Walter Hadley, the government enumerator for East and West Dayton precincts, had a little experience which tended to develop his muscle to some extent. Mr. Hadley wishing to make a thorough and complete enumeration of his territory. He had one family that live on the Oregon City Paper and Pulp Mill Co.'s property in the Willamette river bottom, about five miles from Dayton (probably 10 the route Walter took). This was the last family he visited in his work. He rode his wheel as far as F. L. Post's, where he had to abandon it and foot it along the river bank about three miles, more than six miles there and back—over boulder-stones, gravel, sand logs and brush, which had a tendency to warm the young man up at the end of his journey. He fortunately found everybody at home—even the dog, and cat.

Although M. W. Kreitz does not have a large farm he put all of his land to good use. He has near two acres in a variety of fruit trees; 80 of them apple trees, and loaded with fruit. There will probably be 300 bushels of apples or more. He also has a fine garden, in some of which he has a second crop of vegetables growing. About 14 acres of the orchard is in clover, the first crop of which yielded over 6 tons of hay; the second crop is over a foot in height. Diversified crops is the most profitable way of farming, as is shown in almost every instance where practiced.

The Sunday Oregonian contains an account of the death of Charles Galloway, brother of Hon. William Galloway, of McMinnville. His brother left Yamhill county in 1862. It was known he went to San Francisco, but he was lost track of there. A letter written to Judge Galloway, by W. E. Jordan, of Nelson, Ark., informs him that his brother was killed in battle, June, 1864, and was buried where the Arkansas and White rivers run into the Mississippi; he was killed in a fight early one morning. The writer says: I was first to see him and have him join our company. He wore a counskin cap with a tail and mouth on it. He said he had come all the way from Oregon to help us fight. He had no horse, but by his persistence was allowed to go with the cavalry. I was near him when the fight began. He ran 50 yards ahead of our line, shot and killed a major within the federal lines, got the major's horse, pistols and saber, mounted the horse, ran into the federal lines and killed several others, came around and got back without a scratch. He was killed a week before we started on Price's raid into Missouri. He was shot through right thigh, and bled to death. If he could have been removed from the battle field we could have saved his life.

On the way down river Tuesday morning the O. R. & N. steamer Ruth took on board at Spoug's, a number of the students from Chemawa Indian school, and the band from that school. They were on the way to Oregon City, to attend Chautauqua meeting at Gladstone park, where the band will furnish music during the sessions of the Chautauqua, which began July 11 and closes July 21. At the request of those on board the steamer D. E. Brewer, disciplinarian at the school, who was on board accompanying the students, prevailed on the band to entertain those on board with several pieces of music—the leader, Frank Stedemier, not being with the band—having gone down to Oregon City on the train. After leaving Wheatland the band discoursed some excellent music for some time, to the delight of all on board. The Chemawa band well deserves the praise bestowed on them as first class musicians, by those who have heard them play. We would remark here that the Chemawa school is doing a good work in the training of Indians of both sexes in trades and other useful occupations of life. Two members of the band are Filipinos.

On Monday Ed. and Charley Hadaway, Virgil Earl, Clarence Coyl, Robt. Freshour, J. J. Rowley, and Jo. Baxter, started out from this city on a government surveying expedition in the Siletz reservation. They with others go with County Surveyor Branson, who has a contract from the government. The party will probably be out several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar, of Dixie, Polk county, and Mrs. Edgar's niece, came down to visit Mr. Edgar's parents, who live on the Gillanders place. Mr. Edgar went to Portland Tuesday on the steamer Ruth on business.
