COULD REIZE MINES.

Martin Dolph Suggests a Means of Ending the Big Coal Strike.

New York, Aug. 13.—President Roosevelt has in his hands, according to the World, a plan submitted by Martin Dolph, ex-president of the International Order of Railway and Commercial Telegraphers, by which the coal strike could be ended. President Roosevelt referred the proposition to the attorney general's department, and it is now being considered by H. M. Hoyt, acting attorney general.

This plan is to have the government exercise the right of eminent domain over the coal fields of the United States, and then to take out all the hard coal required by the government for its various buildings, on the ships of the navy department and for all other governmental purposes. The right of the government to intervene in a strike which interferes in any way with governmental functions was proved, Mr. Dolph contends, by President Cleveland's intervention in the Chicago strike of 1894, which he ordered out United States troops to keep the strikers from interfering with the transportation of the United States mail.

In the present case the intervention he advocates, Mr. Dolph says, would also break the backbone of the strike by forcing the operators to resume work in all the mines.

Not Allowable in Omeomergine.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Mr. Yerkes, the commissioner of internal revenue, has made a decision on the question of whether palm oil in very small quantities may be used in the manufacture of omeomergine. The commissioner holds in the negative. CORRWOOD SHORTAGE.

Men Get Work in More Desirable Lines, and Choppers are Hard to Find.

Independence, Or., Aug. 11.—A condition that demonstrates the improved commercial conditions in the valley is the scarcity of corrwood. While the shortage does not assume the character of a wood famine, yet the price is considerably advanced over that of last year, and the wood marketed is not as good. Wood dealers say the cause of all this is the inability to obtain men to cut wood, and they think next year will see a still greater advance. Men can obtain work at more desirable and profitable figures and so the demand for wood fuel is greater than the supply.

SHIPPED TO SALEM.

Remains of Tracy Returned to the Oregon Penitentiary for Burial.

Davenport, Wash., Aug. 9.—Tracy's body is on its way to Salem, Oregon. It was taken to Moscow, a station on the Great Northern, 10 miles from here, this afternoon, to be conveyed over that road to Seattle. The inquest was completed this afternoon, and the jury rendered the following verdict:

We, the undersigned, duly sworn by R. F. Moore, coroner of Lincoln county, as a coroner's jury to inquire into the cause of the death of the body of a person before us, after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony of the witnesses, and as follows: That the body is that of Harry Tracy, the escaped convict from the Oregon penitentiary; that said Harry Tracy came to his death at the jail of Lincoln county, on August 6, 1902, by means of a gunshot wound from a pistol in his possession and held in his own hands, after first having been wounded by a party or parties to this jury unknown; that Harry Tracy was an escaped convict from the Oregon penitentiary, and at the time of his death was fleeing from officers and posse in pursuit, and that no one is blameable for his death, but that all efforts to effect his capture were praiseworthy and fully in accordance with the laws of Washington.

BURIED BESIDE MERRILL.

Remains of Harry Tracy Interred at the Salem Penitentiary.

Salem, Or., Aug. 11.—The remains of Harry Tracy were received in Salem Saturday morning, and were quietly buried in the prison cemetery by the side of David Merrill, the convict whose outlaw had cowardly murdered. A few people were allowed to see the corpse, but at the depot many hatched mementoes from the cheap coffin. The burial was unattended by ceremony. Before the coffin was lowered into the grave, the corpse was placed in the purpose of destroying the body, but the grave will be watched in order to prevent any person from stealing the body. As the body was positively identified by the prison officials, there is no question of the payment of the reward, but just who is entitled to it is a problem for the claimants and the state to solve. His famous rifle was given to the officials.

Merrill's rifle was found in the brush within 200 yards of the spot where his body was found.

Those who wish to take their families and spend a week at the state fair will find one of the finest camp grounds on the coast, absolutely free. Any information regarding the fair by the secretary at Portland.

Stickney, Albany county; state auditor, W. D. Hays, Big Horn county; superintendent of public instruction, Charles F. Gleason, Carbon county.

The platform adopted declares allegiance to the national platform of the past. It demands the election of the United States senators by the direct vote of the people; the compulsory arbitration of labor disputes; the government of waste institutions from parliament control, municipal ownership of public utilities, and a return to the original Australian ballot. The establishment of the initiative and referendum is advocated and the opening of the Shoshone Indian reserve is urged.

The Oregon State Fair this year promises to be one of the greatest in the history of the state. The fair has been held on the coast. The fair has been good the past two years, but it will be better this year. Don't fail to see it.

AN EXTRA SESSION RECEIVED CROWNS

PRESIDENT TO CONVENE U. S. SENATE IN NOVEMBER.

At Least Such is the Tenor of Recent Advice Received in Washington—Purpose Will Be the Ratification, if Possible, of a Reciprocity Treaty Between United States and Republic of Cuba.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Advice received here indicates that President Roosevelt will call the senate in extraordinary session early in November. Ever since it became evident that nothing would be accomplished as to reciprocity with Cuba at the recent session of congress, rumors of a more or less definite nature have been in circulation that the president would call an extra session either of the entire congress or of the senate to ratify, if possible, a reciprocity treaty with Cuba. A treaty with Cuba practically has been prepared. It only requires the finishing touches and the signatures of Minister Quesada and Secretary of State Hay to make it ready for presentation to the senate. The president, it is said, hopes to have the reciprocity question cleared away entirely before the regular session of congress.

BRIDGE THE COLUMBIA.

Northern Pacific Will Abandon Big Ferry at Kalama as Soon as Possible.

Portland, Aug. 14.—President Mollen of the Northern Pacific arrived in Portland on a special train from Puget Sound about 8 a. m. leaving again at 4 in the afternoon. "We are going ahead with our plans to get from Vancouver into Portland," said President Mollen, in response to a question on that subject. "There will not only be the bridge across the Columbia river, but also one across the Willamette, to give us a proper entrance to Portland. It will also be necessary to tunnel through the backbone of the peninsula between the two rivers. Our surveys have just been completed and we are going ahead carefully with the other arrangements. It will take about $3,000,000 to bring our trains into Portland from Vancouver, and we will not undertake such a large work without the most careful consideration. We cannot bridge the Willamette river until congress gives the right to do so. But the Columbia bridge need not wait for that, and its construction will go forward at once."

ADVISES SMITH TO FIGHT.

The General's Attorney Criticizes the Action of President Roosevelt.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14.—Judge James Bannan, brother-in-law and attorney of General Smith, made the following statement regarding General Smith's retirement by President Roosevelt: "The sentence of the court-martial was that General Smith be admonished by President Roosevelt for his order. President Roosevelt seems to have construed the word as meaning reprimanded. I have said it once, but I repeat many times. The president has no legal right to increase the sentence of the court-martial. I have advised the general and will continue to advise him to go into the contest with heart and soul. Under such circumstances, his army friends can do no less, for they are more vitally interested than he. Many of them are now importing him to begin action at once."

CONFIDENT THEY WILL WIN.

Mitchell Says He Believes Miners Have the Best of the Contest.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 14.—President Mitchell states he has received information from Pittsburgh that the strike of coal miners along the West Pennsylvania railroad is about to be settled, and that the men will be back to work in a short time. He said it was gratifying to him to know that all such strikes were being settled. These would enable the miners' union to concentrate all its strength in the anthracite region and the West Virginia strike region. Mr. Mitchell said he was confident that the Pennsylvania hard coal miners were going to win.

Professor Black was on his way to Boulder, Colo., presumably for his health, and feeling unable to proceed, telegraphed Dr. Bacon to meet him at the train here. Dr. Bacon saw that Professor Black could live but a little while, and had him taken to his office where he lived but a short time.

EDWARD AND ALEXANDRIA NOW KING AND QUEEN.

Aged Archbishop of Canterbury Nearly Overcome, and It was with Difficulty That He Completed the Ceremony of the Coronation.

London, Aug. 9.—Edward VII, R. I., by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, was today crowned without hitch or harm, and tonight London is noisily celebrating the event for which the world has awaited as, perhaps, it never awaited any other coronation. In all respects the coronation was impressive. That pride of empire which marked Queen Victoria's jubilee was lacking; and in its stead there prevailed among all classes a keen recollection that only six weeks ago their king lay in danger of death, and this today produced thankfulness and genuine sympathy for the man rather than adulation for the king. This, however, did not prevent the public from voicing appreciation of such military display as the short military procession gave them a chance to see.

Until the booming of the guns announced that the crowning of King Edward had been achieved, there lingered in the minds of thousands a nervous apprehension that even at the last moment some untoward event might once more plunge the nation into consternation. When this was passed the unrestrained jubilation was such a tribute to the king's personal popularity as it was an evidence of relief from the tension of the last few weeks. So while the scenes on the streets were marked by many of those elements that usually accompany a great pageant, they will long be remembered, perhaps somewhat tenderly by those who stood on the stands, at windows and on the sidewalks to see King Edward after he had won almost from the jaws of death his crown.

In Westminster Abbey.

In Westminster Abbey the scene was nothing less than marvelous. Nearly 7,000 members of the nobility, the clergy and the gentry had gathered with foreign princes, ambassadors, colonial rulers, Indian potentates, and leaders from the farthest quarters of the globe to where the union jack flies, to do honor to the king. Two incidents of the service for the day will live in the memory of many who witnessed them. The first of them, which almost developed into a dramatic contretemps, centered around the aged Archbishop of Canterbury. From the commencement of the service the archbishop had the greatest difficulty in reading or remembering the prayers. The book from which his aid should have been taken to read about to his hands, and when he came to place the crown upon King Edward's head his huge frame, towering above the seated king, swayed so violently that the Bishop of Winchester had to support him, while the Dean of Westminster put a guiding hand under the crown. It was evident that the Archbishop of Canterbury could not see his sovereign's head, and after probing around he was just about to complete the most important part of the ceremony when it was discovered that he had the crown the back to the front. Slowly he raised it, but too late to prevent the king from prematurely bursting out with a loud "God Save the King." With a tensing that had grown to a pitch of painful nervousness the archbishop finally managed to place the crown correctly upon the king's head. A few moments later came the climax of his feelings. He was kneeling to do the king, when suddenly he almost fainted, and would have fallen upon his sovereign's knees had not King Edward tenderly but firmly grasped both the prelate's hands and lifted him to his feet. The bishop of London, Winchester and Durham clasped their arms around the archbishop, the king kissed his wrinkled hand, the archbishop's head fell back, his feet moved slowly and mechanically, and thus he was more carried than led from the throne to King Edward's chapel, where he was revived.

His Majesty's appearance won extravagant encomiums, especially from the women, many of whom declared that Queen Alexandra did not look a day over 35. The queen's own crowning was brief and simple. When the four duchesses went to hold a canopy over her Majesty's head, the Duchess of Marlborough and the Duchess of Portland led the way. They performed their duties excellently. At the approach of the crucial period for which the peacocks had long practiced, namely, the putting on of their coronets the moment the queen was crowned, a flutter of nervousness ran through the crowd. The coronets were pulled out and pinched into shape, their faces hardened with anxiety, and then all their arms suddenly woke up, and coronets, large and small were put in place, some crooked and some straight. For the next five minutes the peacocks disregarded what passed before them; first one and then another turned around for advice and help, and then ensued a mutual pushing of each other's coronets into place. Throughout the kingdom there were great illuminations and displays of fireworks and general celebration of the event in the evening.

Bad Gang of Rustlers.

Oregon, Wash., Aug. 14.—Eba big gang of stock rustlers, with the best organization, and the most systematic mode of operation since the days of the celebrated horse and cattle thieves of Wyoming and Southern Montana, is now operating in the Oregon country of Northern Washington, and in menacing endless annoyance to the stockmen of that wild, unsettled country.
