

Distress After Eating

Nausea between meals, belching, vomiting, flatulence, fits of nervous headache, pain in the stomach, are all symptoms of dyspepsia, and the longer it is neglected the harder it is to cure it.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Radically and permanently cure indigestion and tone the stomach and other digestive organs for the natural performance of their functions.

Accept no substitute for Hood's. "I had dyspepsia twenty-five years ago until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Have taken four bottles of this medicine and can now eat almost anything, sleep well, have no cramps in my stomach, no burning and no distress." Mrs. WILLIAM D. BARNES, 14 Quincy St., Providence, R. I.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keep the promise.

Brazil Has a Fine Tea. United States Consul Ayne writes from Para a recommendation of a Brazilian beverage, yerba mate tea, which is prepared from the roasted and pulverized leaves of an evergreen forest tree.

Yerba mate is largely consumed in Paraguay and in the Brazilian States, where it is made. It is extensively consumed in Argentina, in Uruguay, and to a less extent in Chile. There is a small consumption in other States of Brazil, a small quantity is exported to Europe and still less to the United States and Canada. Estimated exports may reach 45,000 to 57,000 tons annually.

Yerba mate has a peculiar bitter, smoky taste, which is usually considered unpleasant, and this has largely operated to prevent its more extensive use as a beverage. This smoky bitterness is chiefly due to the rude method employed for drying the leaves, and it seems likely that the improved methods of drying the mate on iron or copper pans would give a much more delicate and agreeable product. Mate is said to have all of the best qualities of coffee and tea as a stimulating health beverage, without the disadvantages of either. It is a more gentle stimulant than either and is said to be much used in the hospitals of Paris.

The tree could probably be grown in southern California, perhaps in southern Texas, certainly in many parts of the Philippines.

Could Get No Rest. Freiburg, Minn., Oct. 17 (Special).—Mr. R. F. Goward, a well known man here, is suffering from the relief from suffering he has obtained through using Dodd's Kidney Pills. His experience is well worth repeating as it should point the road to health to many another in a similar condition of kidney trouble.

"I had an aggravating case of kidney trouble," says Mr. Goward, "that gave me no rest day or night but using a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills put new life in me and I feel like a new man."

"I am happy to state I have received great and wonderful benefit from Dodd's Kidney Pills. I would heartily recommend all sufferers from kidney trouble to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a fair trial as I have every reason to believe it would never be repeated."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make you feel like a new man or woman because they cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys mean pure blood and pure blood means bounding health and energy in every part of the body.

Four Thousand Godfathers. Princess Irene of Prussia is better provided for in the matter of godfathers than any other woman in the world. She can boast of no fewer than 4,000 godfathers, and how she came to obtain so many is a pretty story.

When she was born the war of 1870 was drawing to an end, and peace being concluded just at the time of her christening, her father, Prince Henry of Hesse, requested all the officers and men of the regiments under his command to stand godfathers to his little daughter, whom he named Irene (Peace) in commemoration of the end of the war.—London Tattler.

BREAD OF HUMANITY

I am compelled by a sense of gratitude to tell you the great good your remedy has done me in my case of contagious blood poison. Among other symptoms I was severely afflicted with rheumatism, and for almost past going. The disease got a firm hold upon my system, my blood was thoroughly poisoned with the virus. I lost in weight, was run down, had sore throat, eruptions, spotsches and other evidences of the disease. I was truly in a bad shape when I began the use of S. S. S., but the persistent use of it brought me out of my trouble safe and sound, and I have the courage to publicly testify to the virtues of your great relief.

S. S. S., and to recommend it to all blood-poison sufferers, sincerely believing if it is taken according to directions, and given a fair trial, it will thoroughly eliminate every particle of the virus. JAMES CURRAN, Stark Hotel, Greensburg, Pa.

Painful swellings in the groins, red eruptions upon the skin, sores in the mouth and loss of hair and eyebrows, are some of the symptoms of this vile disease. S. S. S. is an antidote for the awful virus that attacks and destroys even the bones. S. S. S. contains no Mercury, Potash or other mineral ingredient. We offer $1.00 per bottle for proof that it is not absolutely vegetable. Home treatment book giving the symptoms and other interesting and valuable information about this disease is mailed free. Our physicians advise free to those who write us.

Science and Invention

The so-called canals of Mars have been reproduced by M. A. Baumann, of Zurich, in the cracks and fissures appearing in cylinders and spheres subjected to great pressure.

An expert of the Bureau of Plant Industry reports that the Salton Basin in California is actually better adapted for the culture of the date-palm than are those parts of the Sahara Desert, where the best exported dates are produced. It is believed that this part of California could yield dates enough to supply the entire United States.

There are also places in Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas where this characteristic Oriental fruit, dear to the memories of all readers of the "Arabian Nights," could, it is said, be cultivated with success.

The electro-stimulator of M. Otto is an attempt to solve the problem of oxidizing water at the home of the consumer. The apparatus includes a little box containing a transformer and an accumulator, with a commutator for reversing about one hundred times per second if the current is continuous. The ozone generated passes through a filter of wadding to an emulsifier, where the water and ozone are energetically mixed before passing from the spigot.

The oscillator may be connected to an ordinary lighting circuit, and the current regulated by a rheostat, as well as a simple incandescent lamp.

An ingenious Englishman, Harrison Martindale, has invented a radium clock, which, it is computed, could run 30,000 years if uninterfered with. It consists of a tube containing a small quantity of radium, supported on a quartz rod in an exhausted glass vessel.

To the lower end of the tube is attached an electro-scope, consisting of long strips of silver. The natural glow of the radium sends an electric charge into the strips, causing them to separate until they touch the sides of the vessel, whereupon they are instantly discharged and fall together again. This operation is repeated automatically every two minutes, so that each beat of this singular "clock" may be said to be two minutes long.

Professor Elrod, of the University of Montana gives a striking description of the treasure that his State possesses in sapphires. The only systematic mining for these precious stones in the United States is done in Montana.

The annual output amounts to 450,000 or 500,000 carats, including the stones that are suitable for setting in gems and those that are only useful for mechanical purposes. It is said that the sapphires in Helena do finer work than is done on the stones that are sent to London to be cut. Perhaps some body will suggest that Montana should be called the "Gem State" in view of the fact that her output of precious stones exceeds the production in that line of all the rest of the United States.

INTERESTING TREES OF INDIA. Eagle or Aloe Wood and Chinese Tallow Tree Much Prized.

Two interesting numbers of the Agricultural Ledger have just been issued in Bombay. They are devoted to a description of two trees which grow and are much prized in India—the eagle, or aloe wood, and the Chinese tallow tree.

David Hooper, the director of the industrial section of the Indian Museum, who is responsible for both these papers, describes in an extremely readable manner the various uses to which the products of these trees are devoted, how they are collected and where they are found. The aloe wood tree is a native of the mountains east and southeast of Sylhet, in Burma, and in Bengal. It is valuable on account of a dark, resinous, aromatic juice with which the wood is sometimes gorged. This resin, or sugar as it is colloquially termed, is used for its perfume and supposed medicinal properties. It is very costly and is used both for incense in religious and other ceremonies and also in the preparation of a perfume called agar attar, which is practically as costly as attar of roses. The most interesting feature in connection with the aloe wood tree is the uncertainty as to whether any particular tree will be found to contain the precious resin.

A tribe of hill men known to the natives as agar kutubals make it their business to search for the resinous wood. Their trade is a secret which they always endeavor to preserve from all natives of other tribes. A party of agar kutubals goes off into the mountains with provisions for as long as three months, and they prosecute their tedious search in districts where probably a human being is not seen from month to month. Trees have to be chopped down and hauled to pieces before it can be ascertained whether they contain any of the resinous deposit, and sometimes, after a wearisome search through half a dozen trees, young and old, not a single particle of agar is discovered. Again, and then the collector is repaid for half a month of work. The forest department preserves the tree and collects the agar. Some years ago the officials of that branch of the service were disposed to believe that the tree was becoming extremely rare. However, year by year, the sales of the department increase, so that it may be assumed that the resinous tree is not so scarce as yet there is no ground for the fear that the tree may become extinct. The Chinese tallow tree grows in the United Provinces and in the Punjab. It is valuable because of a species of vegetable tallow which it produces.—Bombay Gazette.

Each Race Its Own. Orientalists Said to Object Strongly to Western Peoples on that Score.

Western nations, with their usual conceit, imagine that they are superior in every respect to the races of another color and consequently to those of the Far East. One of the charges which white men bring against the negro is that the odor emanating from him is the reverse of pleasant and occasionally, in hot weather, is almost unbearable.

The Caucasian never passes to think that possibly the odor of his skin is by no means pleasing to the sense of smell of the other races. The two women, it is stated, that the smell of the white man is not so fragrant to the negro as it is imagined, but is, in fact, objectionable to a degree.

According to a recent issue of the New York Times, a Japanese medical man has published a treatise concerning the odor of the Occidental races, declaring that it takes some time for the Oriental to become accustomed to it.

The writer advances the theory—which has been discussed before—that each race has its peculiar odor, that it is partly racial, but is in a measure influenced by dietary and other conditions.

The Japanese do not smell each other, but the perfume from their bodies is wafted by the breezes to the Russians, who can distinguish the smell of their enemies at a long distance. The writer, however, states that it is nothing like the pungent and penetrating emanation proceeding from the Western nations, in which traces of garlic and onion, disease and other odors are of a coarse and over-abundant dietary are sure to be found.

There are reasons to think that the Japanese doctor may be right and perhaps each race has its characteristic odor.

Certain it is that primitive races have a much keener sense of smell than the members of a highly civilized race. With civilization and the art of living in an artificial manner, from the use of the senses of sight and smell become less acute. The Japanese have not embraced civilization for so long a period as to lose the qualities of a people living in a state of nature. Indeed, the great majority are not civilized at all.—Chicago Chronicle.

By Elimination. Jokes about twins are more numerous than twins themselves. For all that, there need be no hesitation in repeating a joke which passes current in at least one section of the country.

"There used to live over on Painter's farm," said the humorist who told the story, "a couple of twins named Dan and Abe. They moved away since. At the time I remember 'em they were grown men, but they were as near like as them two galled jugs. The only difference was that Dan had good, sound teeth and Abe, he'd lost most of his out of the front part of his face."

"The only way to know which was which was to stick your finger in Abe's mouth. If he bit ye it was Dan."
