This Wife a Treasure.

The saving habit may not be as much in favor today as thirty years ago, but one New York man has had occasion to be converted to a belief in it. He is a man who has worked seventeen years as a carpenter. His wife died recently, leaving him enough money to live in comfort the rest of his days. He knew that his wife took care of his money, but had no idea that she had saved so much.

Training the Colt.

Many valuable horses are spoiled by improper or harsh treatment in training. A man who is incapable of understanding the disposition of horses is certainly incapable of training them. Two-thirds of the horses that have been called vicious can be managed by proper treatment, says a contributor to Farm and Home.

It is bad policy to train a colt unless he is in the best of spirits. The brain will be more active, therefore the disposition easier to control. On the other hand, if you train a colt while he is thin in flesh, in poor spirits and on light food, as some men do, he will not take notice of objects, and when on good feed later, he is not well trained. Have them in good spirits, give plenty of feed, and use less whip.

Uncle Snooks Puzzled.

"What puzzles me," said Uncle Snooks, as he looked up from a book he was consulting, "is this. If a man is standing on the side of a hill or mountain, how is he to settle in his mind whether he is on an acclivity or a declivity? According to my dictionary here, the former is 'a slope up,' and the latter 'a slope down.' I've never yet seen a slope up that didn't slope down."

Matter of Judgment.

Blood Bath Knocks Rheumatism

Remarkable Effects of a Remedy That Actually Irrigates the Entire Blood Supply.

It sounds queer to take a blood bath but that is precisely the effect of a most remarkable remedy known as S. S. S. It has a peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In a few minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison. It dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to dissolve, renders them neutral and scatters those peculiar formations in the nerve centers that cause such mystifying and often baffling rheumatic pains.

And best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach. If you have drugged yourself until your stomach is nearly paralyzed, you will be astonished to find that S. S. S. gives no sensation but goes right to work. This is because it is a pure botanical infusion, is taken naturally into your blood just as pure air is inhaled naturally into your lungs. The great Swift Laboratory has spent millions of dollars in perfecting, producing and placing in the hands of the public this wonderful remedy. So give your blood a good bath with S. S. S., for it knocks the worst forms of rheumatism and gives you freedom to enjoy life. You can get it at any drug store at $1.00 a bottle. It is a standard remedy, recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. If yours is a peculiar case and you desire expert advice, write to The Swift Specific Co., 160 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Beauty of Spider's Web.

There are few more beautiful objects than a spider's web covered with dew. In symmetry, in perfection of geometrical arrangement and in the prismatic reflection of color it is a gorgeous object. And consider the wonderful devices that our garden spider has for attending to its toilet. FARM AND ORCHARD

Notes and Instructions from Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations of Oregon and Washington, Specially Suitable to Pacific Coast Conditions

Sanitation Necessary in All Rural Homes.

That it is necessary that a family living on the farm know more about sanitation and hygiene than a city family, because the farmer is responsible for the health of his entire little community, while in the city there are boards of health, inspectors and intelligent neighbors next door to mitigate any results of ignorance or carelessness, was maintained by Mrs. Henrietta W. Calvin, dean of the home economics department of the Oregon Agricultural college, in an address at the recent conference on the conservation of human life.

"With air filtered through forests and cleansed by meadows and fields, free from the nerve-racking noise of cars, unannoyed by the odor of packing house or manufactory, with the absolute control of water and food supply, there seems no reason why the dweller in the rural home die save by accident or from old age," said Mrs. Calvin.

"True, the death rate is less among people on farms than among townpeople, yet it is not nearly so low as it should be. If lawyer A, merchant B, Dr. C, clerk D, and minister E all live in the same neighborhood, offended by the same ill-kept barn of teamster F, it is not necessary that A, B, C, D and E all know the harmfulness of that ill-kept barn. It is only necessary that one of them knows this fact, acts upon it, and starts the ordinary processes of law.

"It is not necessary that all the residents of Portland study the water supply, the condition of foods in the market, the sanitary conditions of dairies. If only a few know and insist enough on proper conditions, then all will derive the benefit.

"It is not that the owner of a rural home knows or cares less than the city dweller; it is that he must know more, because he is dependent wholly upon his own knowledge and care for the wholesome surroundings of his family.

"In cities a man is not only protected from the carelessness of his neighbors, but he is often prevented from suffering the consequences of his own carelessness. If he will not keep his premises clean, his weeds cut, his barn in order, then the officers of the law will do these things for him and force him to pay.

"A rural home is defined by Sedwick as being a home which stands alone, separated by considerable space from other residences, and one in which the occupants are dependent upon their own supply of water and milk, and dispose for themselves of sewage and waste. There are no statistics concerning the health in these separate homes. If health on the farm is to be attained, there must be a constant educational campaign with that end in view.

"There may come a time when men on farms will encourage a sanitary inspector in their community as they now do for the health of their fruit trees. The time may come when a community will as willingly submit to an order that 'You must install septic tanks for your house' as they now obey a mandate, 'You must spray or cut down your infected orchard,' or 'You must kill your diseased horse.' "We cannot say 'Move your house.' There were reasons for its location near the road, near to neighbors, near to water, sheltered from winds, etc. We can only say, 'Improve what you have. Start with the barn. Destroy the causes of odors. Do away with the manure, the breeding place of flies."

"Typhoid is not a rural disease, and the country fly may not have typhoid on its legs, but it will have the germs of diarrhoea, which may perhaps bring infantile paralysis."

Mrs. Calvin then spoke of disease carrying by rats, cats, cows, hogs and tuberculous chickens, by water supply contaminated by seepage from the barn or cesspool, and other means.

Shows Defects in Farm Butter Making.

"A fairly rich cream gives best results for butter making," says O. G. Simpson, of the Oregon Agricultural college dairy school. "A cream that will test 30 to 35 per cent or produce about three and a half pounds of butter to ten pounds of cream is good. Other conditions being equal, a rich cream will keep longer and churn more easily than a thin cream.

"If the cream is to be kept any length of time before ripening, it should be cooled immediately after skimming to below 60 degrees. Tin containers are preferable to crocks or other material. Tin allows the temperature to be changed more easily, and is easier to handle and keep clean. If two lots of cream are to be mixed, they should both assume the same temperature before mixing."

Cream for Butter Making.

Four main defects in farm butter as compared with creamery butter are pointed out by O. G. Simpson of the dairy school at the Oregon Agricultural college. He says:

"The main defects in farm butter, as compared with creamery butter, are bad flavor, staleness or rancidity, too many shades of color, and unsuitable packages. The flavor is of the highest importance, and no matter how good the butter is in other respects, if flavor is wrong it is classed as an inferior article.

"No matter how skillful the butter-maker is, it is impossible for him to make a strictly first class butter out of poorly flavored or tainted cream. Cream may become tainted from four causes: Bacterial infection, absorption of flavors, food eaten, or disease in the cow. The bacterial infection may come of unclean cows and stables, unclean condition of milkers, unclean utensils, or keeping the cream in unclean surroundings, especially in a temperature above 60 degrees.

"Absorption of flavors takes place with remarkable rapidity when milk or cream is allowed to stand in an atmosphere where odors are present, especially when the milk is warm. Foods that have strong tastes and odors such as onions, decayed silage, old stalky kale, or turnip tops should not be fed within a few hours of milking. Experiments have shown that milk will not possess the flavors of such foods if not drawn for eight or twelve hours after feeding. Cows that are abnormally heated or excited before milking give a tainted milk. Many diseases also affect the cow's milk."

Peat Soil and Sand for Cranberries

To grow cranberries you must have peat soil," says Prof. C. I. Lewis of the Oregon Agricultural college. "If the soil contains much clay the vines will grow, but the plant will not be very productive.

"First the land is thoroughly cleaned off, all trees, brush, grass and even grass roots being removed. The land is then leveled and several inches of sand, free from grass and salt, is spread on. It is important to keep the water table within a foot of the surface during the growing season. If there is a stream of living water on the land it is all the better, since you can flood the land with this and help to keep down insect and frost injuries."

O. A. C. has no cranberry bulletin at present, but valuable ones can be secured by writing to the Wisconsin experiment station at Madison, the Massachusetts agricultural college at Amherst, or by sending for the department number of Better Fruit, published at Hood River, Ore., which contains a special article on cranberries by C. N. Bennett of Warrenton, considered one of the best experts in this industry on the coast.

Warm Weather Art Taught at College.

The warm weather courses in art at the Oregon Agricultural college summer session will be conducted mainly out of doors, to develop a keener appreciation of art as applied to the beauties of nature, and a more friendly attitude toward art as related to the happiness of everyday life.

This does not mean that the work will be superficial, but by approaching the subject from the point of view of composition, beauty and use, rather than from an analytic view point, there will be aroused a better understanding of the relation of art to daily happiness, a matter of importance in an age which lays so much stress on the utilitarian.

A home science course for school girls 15 years old or more is a part of the O. A. C. summer session work this year.

Milking the Kicking Cow.

The best method that I know of for handling a kicking cow is to tie about her body a half-inch rope with a large ring at one end. Place the rope just in front of the left hip and just behind the right, with the ring against the flank on the right side, and pull it up very snug. The ring should be four or five inches in diameter, the larger the better. If it is properly placed, the cow can't get her foot up to kick.—Farm and Home.

The Best Music.

The rooster's crow does very well As "music" now and then, But the thing that stands for something Is the cackle of the hen. While the first may crow the sun up, We aren't likely to forget That a fresh egg served for breakfast Beats the finest sunrise yet.
