India's Woven Wind.
New England's or even old England's cotton trade is but in its infancy compared with the industry in India "For what are 300 years against 3,000?" says a writer. "Fabrics as fine as any that can be turned out at the present day by the most perfect machinery in Lancashire were produced by the nimble fingers of Hindu spinners and the primitive looms of Hindu weavers a thousand years before the invasion of Britain by the Romans. When Britons were shivering in their wool, in fact, the Hindus were glorying in garments of a texture so fine as to have earned the poetic description of 'woven wind'."

SCHOOL NOTES

The 8th grade took a test in Arithmetic last week and Lillian Waters received the highest standing.

Glenn Waters and Irven Chaistenson were absent from school Monday on account of sickness.

Sadie Wilson was absent from school Monday on account of sickness.

The fifth and eighth grades are having a contest in spelling.

Last Friday afternoon the school, with the help of Mesdames D. DeTiere, J. McParlane, Geo. G. Christensen, W. W. Waters and her daughter

Oquella planted some flowers. We made six beds each about 3 x 20 ft. along the north side of our school house, from which we expect to gather flowers on Arbor day.

The School had their pictures taken Tuesday the 11th.

The eighth grade is studying current events.

She Saw Him Passing By.

That the aged are not easily roused to enthusiasm or excitement is well known, but they are not often as calm as the old lady that the Windsor Magazine tells about.

An old man fell from a second story window into the street where an anxious crowd immediately gathered to see whether he was seriously injured. One of his daughters rushed frantically into the first floor room, where his wife sat knitting, and cried: "Oh, mother, mother, father's fallen from the top of the house into the road! Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Yes, my child," answered the old lady placidly, looking up from her work: "I saw him pass the window."
