Henry Stermer received quite severe injuries the latter part of last week when he was run over by a wagon. He was handing one of the reins to Elmer Baxter who was on the wagon, and in doing so he had to get in behind one of the horses. He had a pitchfork under his arm and as he stepped in to reach the line he struck the horse with the fork and the team started before he could step out of the way. Elmer saw what would happen and jumped off the wagon and raised the rack up so it would remove some of the weight, and just the empty wagon passed over him. He is reported as doing nicely at this writing.
