HOOVER SILAGE

The man who starved his horse to death on sawdust went at it all wrong. He ought to have put the sawdust in the silo.

On account of the shortage of feed last fall farmers baled much of their straw and many of them sought the advice of the county agent as to the best method of feeding straw. Some farmers who had silos and not enough corn to fill them were told to mix straw with green corn. B. F. Smith who lives on the the John Pennington place south of McMinnville followed the county agent's advice and mixed seven loads of straw with 35 tons of green corn. Mr. Smith is now feeding 12 cows and some young stock on this silage with some hay and nograin. He says he has the best silage in the county with no waste. His cows having never had silage before were expected to go slow on this Hoover ration, but Mr. Smith says that not a single bite was left. Mr. Smith is so enthused over his success that he says he is going to build another silo next year.
