

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, Anna P. Westerfield as administratrix of the estate of Luella May Westerfield, deceased, has filed her final account of the administration upon said estate, in the County Court, of Yamhill County, State of Oregon and said Court has appointed the 12th day of June, A. D., 1920, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the County Court room in the Court House at McMinnville, Yamhill County, Oregon, as the time and place for the final hearing of said final account and for the final settlement of said estate.

NOW, THEREFORE, all persons interested in said estate are hereby notified and required to be and appear at said time and place so appointed for the hearing of said final account and then and there show cause if any exists why said final account should not be allowed and approved and her bondsmen exonerated.

Dated this 10th day of May, A. D., 1920.
Anna P. Westerfield,
Administratrix of said estate.

L. Wambsgans has been considerable better this past week and was among other things able to visit his old time friend, H. Kulper for the greater part of the day.

Her First Railroad Trip.

To your stories of country folk leaving their native haunts to see the world for the first time, may I add, writes a country correspondent of the London Morning Post, a famous story of our part of the country, about an old lady going for her first journey by train? She went in a terrible state of apprehension, and on arriving safely remarked that the train had been a murderous one, since it had run over and killed no fewer than fourteen persons. Then it came out that somehow she had picked up the idea, and it had taken firm root, that whenever the engine's whistle sounded it meant some one had been run over on the line; each whistle was the engine driver's apology and requiem.

Calculates Age of Sun.

Here is a new calculation of the age of the sun. M. Peronnet read it recently to the French Academy of Science. On the principle that the mean temperature of a star remains approximately equal to the surface temperature it had when first formed, and giving the sun an internal temperature of 12,000 deg. C., or double that of its surface, and calculating its mass to be 2 by 10,30 kilograms, the sun cannot have been formed more than between two and six millions of years ago. A star with a surface temperature of 600,000 deg. C. would have been formed from a nebula in 300 days and one with 6,000,000 degrees in seven hours.

Profitable Hints

When you hear the train whistle rush to the office, storm around there half an hour when you notice the carrier just delivers the mail.

If you are a little "short", ask the postmaster for a small loan; he's always flush and after two months if he wants it, let him dun you for it.

When you call at the office for your mail and the postmaster hands it out to you, ask him if that is all.

If you ask for mail and he tells you there is none, tell him there ought to be, then go home and send the rest of the family around at different times of the day.

Don't bring your mail to the office until the mail closes, then abuse the postmaster for not opening the mailbox and putting your letter in.

When you want a stamp on your letter, tell the postmaster to put it on; if he won't do it, go for him. In case you put it on yourself soak it in your mouth long enough to remove the mucilage; it will then stick until dry.

Be sure to ask the postmaster to credit you for stamps if he has any accommodation about him he'll do it.

If you have a box, stand and drum on it until the postmaster hands out your mail; it makes him feel good, especially if he is waiting on some body else.

To Save an Editor

Here is a minister who appreciates the editor. At a recent editorial convention he offered the following toast:

To save an editor from starvation, take his paper and pay for it promptly.

To save him from bankruptcy, advertise in his paper liberally. To save him from profanity, send him every item of news of which you can get hold.

To save him from profanity, write your correspondence plainly on one side of the sheet and send it in as early as possible. To save him from mistakes, bury him. Dead people are the only ones who never make mistakes."

Ray Spangle of the Pendleton Rod and Gun Club will leave Pendleton for his home in Dayton, Oregon, during the present week to practice trapshooting as a candidate for the American Olympic trapshooting team. He stood twentieth among the shooters of the nation in 1919 and believes he can qualify for the overseas trip.

In Praise of Silence.

Carlyle says, "Out of silence comes thy strength." We know it does. The finest, best thinking come from quiet and silence. The greatest deeds are the result of thought. The best writings are done in the silence of the study. We look up into the sky on a starry night. There is a peace and silence from it that "passeth understanding." Silence is not loneliness—it is peopled with the best of all that there is in life to those who will understand.—Detroit News.

When Is a Ladder Safe?

There seems to be such a general lack of knowledge of the angle at which ladders should be placed to secure the maximum of safety for the men working on them that Safety News has prepared an interesting diagram showing the position of ladders of various lengths to insure safe use. The angle of 75 degrees has been found, through a series of experiments, to give the greatest degree of safety, and to secure this angle, all that is necessary is to place the foot of the ladder approximately one-quarter of the length of the ladder away from the vertical. This angle will prevent undue straining of the ladder, or slipping of the ladder feet when placed too flat, and at the same time will give the feet of the workmen sufficient room when they are working near the top of the ladder. Another point that should not be forgotten in connection with ladders is that portable ladders should be fitted with safety feet or points, in order that a sure grip on the floor or ground may be secured.—Scientific American.

The Female of the Species.

A French scientist holds that there is no doubt that woman is biologically superior to man. It is known that among certain insects eggs insufficiently nourished produce male species, while normal eggs produce females. Again, among certain animals the male species, despite its physical beauty, is generally smaller and less resistant. There is something in his nature and attributes that make him more fragile and less robust than the female. Therefore, according to the general law of embryology, it must be concluded that the female represents the more stable element of our race.

Benevolent Poison.

How many people have ever heard of strophanthus or physostigmine? Yet it was by the investigation of the properties and effects of these drugs that Sir Thomas Frazer, the famous Scottish physician just dead, earned much of his professional fame. Strophanthus was discovered and used as an arrow poison by some native tribes. It is now, like some other deadly poisons, a benevolent agent in heart affections. Physostigmine is the active principle of the Calabar bean, and was harnessed by Sir Thomas Frazer to useful purposes in the treatment of the human eye.

Gold Found in British Isles.

Discovery of gold in the Marionethshire mountains by an Australian recalls many interesting facts regarding discoveries of gold in the British Isles. It was near the same place, at Colgan, that a vein of quartz, containing £30,000 worth of gold was struck in 1862 by a company promoted by John Bright. The most interesting gold discoveries, however, have taken place in Scotland. Gold was found at Kildonan, in Sutherlandshire, 1868, there immediately being a big rush of prospectors who were disappointed in their enterprise.

Poetry.

If it be of no use to make men happy, to quicken in them the joy of living, to heighten their pleasures, to dry their tears; if it be of no use to teach them wisdom, to open their eyes, to purify their thoughts, to give them to fight, to brace them to endure, to teach them to be gentle; then, indeed, we may ask, "What is the use of poetry?" But, while poetry can do all these things, I think it must be allowed by the most practical that it has a very important part to play in the work of the world.—Richard Le Gallienne.

Clouds That Foretell Storms.

From the hue and texture of the distant clouds something can be learned of the character of the storm that produces them. The hydrographic bureau at Washington informs ship captains that when the cirrus cloud plumes seen radiating from the storm are faint and opalescent in tint, the approaching storm is an old one of large area; but if the clouds are "of snowy whiteness, projected against a blue sky, it is a young cyclone of small area but great intensity."—Youth's Companion.

WHITCOMB RILEY'S KIN A "MIRACLE MAN"

Dr. J. S. Riley of Washington, D. C., first cousin of the great American poet, James Whitcomb Riley, is now being called the "Miracle Man" through his healing of the sick. He heals through prayer and faith. It is said his works healed a cousin of former Governor Folk of Missouri of blindness of long duration in less than six weeks.
