Potato Certification Generally Profitable

Potato growers in the northwest are obtaining better yields by using certified seed.

The merit of certification is slowly becoming understood by the general class of farmers. A large number of inquiries have been received this year from farmers, by the experiment station at Corvallis. While planting certified seed will not always result in a crop that will pass certification requirements it usually means a considerably better yield of potatoes. The potatoes will be more uniform and have less culls than where the common potatoes are used for seed.

Certified potatoes must be of uniform shape and size, showing the varietal characteristics, and comparatively free from disease. But do not think that because they are free from disease, you will get disease free potatoes that season. Potatoes may become infected from diseased soil or containers before planting. Always treat the potato seed before planting. It serves as a disinfectant for the seed and kills the disease organisms that may have reached the surface of the seed from the containers. Use corrosive sublimate for treating them before the seed is cut for planting.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis.—Earl E. Kearns, a former student of Dayton high school and now a junior in electrical engineering at O. A. C., was recently pledged to Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity.

Men elected to Tau Beta Pi must have a scholastic standing which is within the upper fourth of the seniors or upper eighth of the juniors. A failure in any one subject bars a candidate from election. Scholarship, character, and interest in engineering are primary qualifications for membership.

Kearns is a member of Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honorary fraternity, and belongs to the Chi Alpha Pi social fraternity.

Many of the ailments in hog raising are due to the lack of minerals in the food. Minerals should be kept before the hogs at all times. Plenty of exercise is also necessary. The following mineral mixture is recommended by the O. A. C. Experiment Station, fed either by putting one-tenth pound per day in the hog's ration, or by putting in a self feeder.

Slacked coal—100 pounds; stock salt, 8 pounds; ground bone, (fine), 4 pounds; ground sulfur, 1 pound; air slacked lime, 2 pounds; Glauber's salt, 2 pounds; potassium iodine, 0.4 pound. If slacked coal is not available, wood ashes or charcoal may be substituted.

A Man Behind

It is not the gun, but the man behind it, that counts. Not the note, but the man behind it, that establishes its value.

And so on, all down the line. It is not the Bank, but the men behind it, that create confidence in its stability. We are proud of the officials and directors of this Bank, proud of its stock holders, proud of our patrons. They all are the people behind our bank, the ones who make it strong.
