Bright, Orderly Village Attractive to Buyers

In every town there should be some intelligent supervision. And this should be much more easily obtained than in a city. In villages the interests are peculiarly common to all. What benefits one in some measure benefits everyone. It should be easy to establish a policy of co-operation. There would be certain standards to be sought; certain things to be prohibited. Ugliness would be abolished by common consent. Order should be the rule and habit. Leadership would be needed, but there is leadership, potential or active, in every community. Whatever would make the villages brighter and more orderly would make them more attractive to the buyer, to the traveler and to the homeseeker.

A village is more than a mere community; it is a community center. It can afford recreation for its own and for those it seeks to interest in its business or its affairs, for the farmers and their families, who need entertainment and diversion in their busy lives.—Kansas City Star.

People Make Community

Tuscaloosa is a better city in many ways than the average. It is not fine buildings, broad streets nor educational opportunities—but the people make a community; and it's the spirit that counts. Co-operative efforts will bring any city into prominence and establish it permanently in its rightful place in the sun.—Tuscaloosa News.
