Care For The Human Machine During Harvest

Hiring help is easier than keeping it to the end of harvest. Breaking in a new worker takes the time of the foreman and usually involves expense for transportation from the railway. It slows down the output and often costs the loss of a part of the acreage.

The State Board of Health sends the following suggestions with the hope that Oregon's farmers may keep their harvesters at 100 percent efficiency, and that they may save the state the expense of stamping out epidemics which frequently arise in temporary camps. The board will issue a bulletin soon with suggestions for the workers themselves which may be posted in camps.

LOCATION OF CAMPS—
should be on well-drained ground, and should be chosen after consultation with county health officer.

PURE WATER SUPPLY—
Before any water is to be used for drinking purposes it should be analyzed to determine its freedom from disease producing germs. Upon request the laboratory of the State Board of Health will send a sterile bottle and full directions for the collection and shipment of the water sample. There is no charge attached to this service; the only requirement being that the bottle must be obtained from the State Laboratory. Address all inquiries regarding the examination of water to the Director of the Laboratory, State Board of Health, 301 Fitzpatrick Bldg., Portland, Oregon. If the water comes from a well be sure that there is no drainage back into the well from water used in washing hands, dishes and similar purposes. Drinking water should be supplied within 300 feet of each camp. All privy vaults and cesspools should be at least 200 feet from the water supply and so located that pollution is impossible.

PERSONAL CLEANLINESS—
Make it easy for the workers to wash their hands often, and always before eating. A washbasin chained to the wall near a faucet, and the provision of soap will encourage cleanliness and may prevent the loss of many workers through illness. A camp sanitation expert says, "The chief cause of disease in camp is eating with unwashed hands."

WASTE DISPOSAL—Garbage of food left overs should be placed in tightly covered receptacles and removed daily, and either buried or burned. Fly tight privies or water-flushed toilets should be maintained in a clean and sanitary condition. Toilets for women should be provided in the fields. At least one caretaker should be employed by the management to keep the camp grounds in sanitary condition.

FIRST AID SUPPLIES—Increase the probability of health among your harvesters by getting from your local druggist a supply of bandages and simple remedies which he will suggest. L. F. S.

Farm Reminders

(From O. A. C. Experiment Station)

Growers who are using the paradichlorobenzene treatment for peach and prune root borers will not find it effective unless its application is followed by 10 days of 55 degrees, Fahrenheit or higher. The soil must be reasonably dry.

In handling pears the cool night temperature is of much benefit. The temperature of Bartlett pears picked in the heat of the day dropped from 104 to 63 degrees when out at night.

Only a clear fruit juice can be depended on to make a clear, sparkling jelly. Cloudiness is due to suspended particles that cannot be removed by ordinary methods of filtration.

New that sufficient moisture has fallen to enable garden seed to germinate, it is recommended that farm gardeners plant as many vegetables as possible for late fall and early winter use, including spinach, head lettuce, radishes, turnips, onion sets or onion seed, and peas and cabbage for next spring's early crop.
