University of Oregon. (Special):
A drive for offensive. This is the program of the Oregon football team in the last minute preparation for the California eleven. Oregon, heretofore a doubtful quantity meets the big test Saturday against the Bears in Portland.

Coach Dick Smith hampered by a crippled team, is driving his men thru a week of long strenuous hours of grueling practice in an attempt to get a scoring team. He is using every means to secure a co-ordinated offensive machine.

A slow moving line has handicapped the teams in three games played this season, but from the way the men are going through their races this week on the field and against the plunging machine the word speed is becoming a part of the new spirit.

Oregon has two backfield combination working this week. One, composed of Lynn Jones at full, Lonie Anderson at quarter and Wetzel and Vitus at half, is scheduled to do the heavy work of line plunging. The other, made up of Kiminki and Mimmaugh at the half, Hodgen at full, and Harrison at quarter is a lighter combination and may be used in case the former combination is unable to gain ground.

Wetzel is an exceptional punter and will be used to give Oregon an even exchange in California's percentage football. The Webfoot aggregation hopes to give California a hard fought battle.

Beat Everything in Sight

Here is a good one about a little lad who was given his first watch the other day as a gift on his ninth birthday. His aunt tells the story.

"Although he seemed pleased," she said, "when he first opened the box his enthusiasm was quite restrained. But he dashed into the house on his return from school that day, and exclaimed jubilantly.

"My, but I've got a dandy watch!"

"I'm glad you like it," said his mother, duly pleased at his pleasure.

"Yes," he said, "it's half an hour ahead of Jim's watch, and it's a whole hour ahead of the clock in the drug store! Gee, it beats them all!"—St. Paul Dispatch.

New Yorker's Act of Courtesy Was Wasted

He is a New Yorker distinguished for his unflinching courtesy. It has become second nature to him to do the right and kind thing. Strangely enough, he is also given to moments of absorption in which external registers only automatically upon his consciousness. Frequently, in his homeward walks, he becomes so occupied with his own thoughts that he is in a world quite apart from that which is worrying past him. However, the instinct of courtesy remains, no matter how preoccupied he may be.

He was strolling homeward an evening or two ago, lost in reverie. The people who went by were merely gray shapes, a flutter on the screen he dimly saw out of the tail of his eye.

One shape came toward him, a vague thing, one of many. As it reached a point abreast of him he saw something white flutter from it to the sidewalk. To his engrossed mind that meant only one thing, that someone dropped something, and the someone a woman, as they are the ones who most often drop things. Courtesy demanded that he stoop and pick it up and return it.

For just one instant he emerged from his preoccupation, stooped and picked up the white thing he had seen flutter down. He proffered it to the young woman, and then, all of a sudden, realized he was handing her a woolly white dog!

"Thanks ever so much," she said, "but I intended to let him down for a little run."

And Mr. Courtesy raised his hat, and passed on and back into his reverie.—New York Evening World.

May Have Come Upon Lost Mormon Trails

Curious old rock trails recently discovered have caused the California State Historical society to launch an extended research into the routes of early day highways in the belief that the evidences found are those of the lost Mormon trails which more than a half century ago connected Utah with the Pacific southwest, according to the New York World.

More than 60 years ago San Bernardino, 22 miles south of Lake Arrowhead, was a Mormon village, planned after Salt Lake City, and to the southwest ox-cart caravans creaked their picturesque way along the monotonous journey.

What is now known as Lake Arrowhead was at that time a rugged, mountainous section with rushing streams. The lost trails are believed to have traversed this section. With the coming of settlers, the mountain streams were stemmed and Little Bear lake came into existence. Later a huge earth-filled dam 1,300 feet wide at the base, with a capacity of 775 acres of water, created Lake Arrowhead.

In the virgin forest of oak, cedar and fir surrounding the present lake old roads wind through the trees to the water's edge, where they disappear to emerge again on the opposite side of the lake.

The historical research workers believe these trails once traversed the former mountain slopes and merged with the old Arrowhead trail in the desert, near Victorville and Hesperia.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.
