If one may judge anything by the empty bottles of various kinds and labels lying around and the spots here and there, where "New York" has been belched forth, Sunday mornings, evidently considerable "booze" of various descriptions is used in this town nearly every Saturday night.

Friday, May 21 is Primaries election day, so, in order to give all politicians another chance to use the columns of the Tribune again and get it before the voters in time we will publish a day early (Wednesday) next week. Send in your copy and we will get it before the people.

We forgot to state in last weeks issue that quite a number of folks from here attended special day feasts at Champoe Saturday and Sunday, May 1st and 2nd. They reported a large attendance and a royal good time. Champoe is the place where the Northwest met many years ago and made the decision between becoming British or American subjects. It was put to a vote and by one majority decided to be Americans so you can see how near this country came being a part of Canada.

Authors Who Evince Interest in Cookery

If the stories of Brillat-Savarin which it is proposed to publish in commemoration of his centenary reveal their author to the world as a successful writer of fiction as well as a gastronomer, he may perhaps be regarded as repaying the interest which some noted novelists have taken in matters of the table. Balzac took a keen interest in cookery, as befitted a man of gigantic appetite. So also did George Sand, whose cookery must have been pretty good, since it was reputed to be as exciting as her romances. Joseph Conrad, as he admitted in connection with a cook book written by Mrs. Conrad, gave a high place in his esteem to the culinary arts, while George Meredith left a book of cookery receipts in his own handwriting which figured in a book seller's catalogue some years ago and may possibly yet appear in print.
