PARTNERS WITH THIEVES
There are men who would not steal for the world, but who never hesitate to pocket the proceeds of theft when they get the chance. Fear of the penitentiary and public obloquy prevent them slipping their fingers into their neighbor's pockets, or forcing his back window with a "jimmie," but, if some one else will do it for them in a safe way, they have no objection to help dispose with the swag. There are men in business who would not think of being dishonest themselves, but have no compunction in participating in the results of the dishonesty of those about them. We have known men to hold up their hands and roll their eyes lugubriously at the lack of morality on the part of "wicked partners," who at the end of the year insisted upon an equal division of the spoil.

The thief who makes no bones about his profession, and the slyster who avows his intention to "do up" everybody he can, is a prince to this enviling hypocrite who "devours widows' houses and for a pretense makes long prayers."

Bootleggers in a Michigan town contributed a fund to buy warm shoes and rubbers for kiddies and have asked the churches to furnish the kiddies. Same old salving of the guilty conscience—sort of rebate to those they have robbed. But how about the heartaches and misery the bootlegger has caused—can he hope to shut out from his conscience the groans and wails of his victims by nature? The bootlegger will need cool shoes in the hereafter to protect him from the hot coals he is going to travel over. With the bootlegger out of business there would be less need of warm shoe contributions for destitute kiddies.

A well known bishop says the end of jazz is in sight, but he doesn't make it clear which end he sees.

Scientists claim to have found a nest of eel's eggs. They'll be discovering hen's teeth next.

INTERESTING WHEAT ITEMS
An elevator in Warren, Minn., received a sample of wheat that tested 14.75 per cent. protein. The farmer who grew it received 30 cents more per bushel for it than did the farmer with the usual 10 per cent. protein, as Minnesota wheat is bought on its protein content. The farmer who produced this high protein wheat followed the crop with extensive croppings of sweet clover.

Denton wheat is a new Texas variety and it has averaged three bushels more per acre than all other varieties tested by the state in three years. The average test weight of the Denton variety is slightly more than 60 pounds.

The farmers wheat pools of western Canada last year turned over a business of $271,000,000, and this immense business was handled entirely by working farmers.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1927
The O. A. C. Extension Service says that while there has not been much liquidation of farm mortgages in Oregon, farmers have been generally catching up with current indebtedness during the past two years. The report says that tree fruit growers have not fared as well as other commodity producers, owing to low prices and trouble resulting from the use of spray. Of general business conditions the Service says the situation continues without developments either way and that there is nothing in sight that suggests sudden changes.

BIG BUSINESS FARMING COMING
John Tromble, president of the Kansas State Farmers Union, in a recent speech at Hutchinson, says that big business has under way the organization and control of agriculture under one head, controlled by big industries, with experts supervising farming and farmers working under orders. Tromble said under this plan of scientific farming farmers would be little less than peasants.
