A PANEL JOB OF MYRTLEWOOD

Mrs. Oscar Beck down at Humboldt state park asked us at the Shepherders' picnic how she could get her name in the Port Orford POST. We pointed to the ledge road a thousand feet above and suggested that she take the family car, hit 80 miles an hour around the curve and... she'd have her name in the paper. Her protest was that she wouldn't be here to see it. We admitted that. But... and we'll keep this on the q.t. from Mrs. Beck... do you know that cottage there at Humboldt state park where the Becks reside is paneled in myrtlewood? If you've never seen a myrtlewood paneled house, you might... hold on there, neighbors and travelers. After all, Mrs. Beck didn't ask us to invite the world to her door. But it's worth seeing. Forgive us, Oscar, forgive us!

FLAGS AVAILABLE FOR POSTOFFICES

American flags are available for all postoffices, according to word received this week by Otto Heckel, Langlois, from the postoffice department.

"This department," Walter Meyers, fourth assistant postmaster general wrote Heckel, "furnishes flags to all postmasters making a request therefor."

In Port Orford we had a visitor in the office who had tried to find the postoffice by the flag. "All postoffices fly flags, don't they?" was the query. We only looked and fumbled the cards on our counter.

Reckon we'd better fly a flag from the Port Orford postoffice, neighbors, so as to sort of direct traffic to the postcard slot. Might work a little hardship on Mrs. Jamieson and Velma Johnson, but the POST will make a deal with them. If they'll furnish the flag we'll hoist it every morning.

After all, the Port Orford POST office right next door to the Port Orford POSTOFFICE, is a mixup or something. We can sell a darned sight more postcards than we can subscriptions. But strangely, the Port Orford POSTOFFICE will not reciprocate and sell Port Orford POSTS... and after all, we buy our stamps from them. Now if the Port Orford POSTOFFICE will reciprocate with the Port Orford POST office... (who started this?)

ARRIVE TO ENTER BANDON STATION

(From Western World)

A group of U. S. Coast Guardsmen arrived this week from various sections of the country to become members of Captain Melvin G. Alvey's crew. They are: H. D. Daniels and R. T. Kittleson, seamen of the cutter Onondaga; H. E. Skinner, J. J. Wiles and A. M. Berglund, apprentice seamen from the Port Townsend training station; and E. J. Millsage, 1st class seaman and cook, from the Coast Guard Cutter Morris.

News Briefs of Port Orford and Vicinity

C. F. Douglas reports that many travelers have called on him during the last week regarding Port Orford archery sets, which he manufactures, and which have become known throughout the nation. Just another boost for Port Orford cedar when one of those sets go out, neighbors.

Mrs. Robert Jones, who formerly lived near the Morill place in Floras hills, writes Mrs. Eddy from Philadelphia that her son, Robert, who was born in Floras Hills, now is with the Bethlehem Steel company at Baltimore, Md. Her sister, Anna, is with the naval ordnance department. The Jones will be remembered by many neighbors in Curry county.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Oxlie and daughters, Doris and Danna, left Port Orford last week for Langlois. After a couple of weeks visiting in Langlois the Oxlies will go on to Lebanon, Ore., where they will make their home.

More than one hundred and fifty "Masterpieces of French Painting" will open in exhibition Wednesday, September 3rd, at the Portland Art Museum for their only appearance in the entire Pacific Northwest, announces Robert Tyler Davis, Director. Representing the artistic wealth of a great nation at its most brilliant period, these original paintings were chosen by Rene Huyghe, Curator of Paintings, Musee du Louvre, Paris not only from the famous Louvre Galleries but from public and private collections throughout France.

The north end of the high school gymnasium has been shingled and William Longstaff reports that part of the building will be ceiled with plywood. This not only will conserve heat during stormy periods but will add to the attractiveness of the building.

Joe Douglas was here from Myrtle creek over the week-end and took a load of furniture back for the Clarence Cooleys.

THE WHITE LINE MEANS CAUTION

If you want to see what happens when drivers will not observe the rules of the road on the Gold Beach-Port Orford-Bandon highway, go down to Paul Leutyler's Battle Rock garage and look over some of the cars that have been towed in recently... the most recent being from Chicago and Portland.

The neighbors know how to drive our roads. Visitors must learn that when the white line comes up in their lane alongside the yellow DON'T TRY TO PASS. The engineers who built our highway know your chances of beating the white line are about as good as those of the proverbial celluloid dog chasing an asbestos cat through the corridors of (See Dante's Inferno... chapter following Purgatory.) You can't beat that white line alongside the yellow, visitors. DON'T TRY.

Mrs. Docia Sweet was called hurriedly to Eugene Tuesday by the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. G. H. Smith.

The Sixes-Langlois bridge club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Lute Henry at Langlois. Present were Mesdames Wes Zumwalt, Fred Kones, Albert Wells, Paul Wagner, Ralph Hall, W. R. Nutt and M. E. Kelly. The first prize went to Mrs. Zumwalt. Mrs. Kelly was in second place.

The club decided to meet every other week during the busy summer season.

C. F. Douglas and wife made a trip to Marshfield over the weekend to take their two grandsons, Willard and Gene Weiss, to their home after a visit in Port Orford. The Weiss' came in from their ranch on Smith river to meet them.

Mr. and Mark Nickerson, the former brother of Mrs. Pugh of Port Orford, spent a few days here this week as did another brother and the parents of Mrs. Pugh who have spent several weeks here vacationing.

Ralph Adams of Bandon (to which we may, eventually, extend an invitation to incorporate with Port Orford) was called from the NYA school at Eugene to Boeing field, Seattle. Ralph will specialize in radio. Good luck, fellow... we're backing you.

That was a swanky affair out at the Sixes Grange last Saturday night when the gals came in formals and the boys wore their "tuxes". But everybody has a good time at Grange hall whether they go formal or in their Levis. You can go formal or otherwise at the dance Saturday night, and you can "hoe 'em down", as we used to say in Wyoming, even in Levis. On Aug. 16 a queen to attend the county fair will be chosen.

Morris Sweet and family of San Francisco, stopped for a short visit with Mr. Sweet's cousins, Art and William Sweet of Sixes, last week. With the visitors were two of their kinfolk Mrs. Anderson and her sister Mrs. Laudell.

The remount service expects to resume the purchase of horses for the army about Sept. 1. Definite plans now are being worked out and it is expected they will be announced in all parts of the western remount area not later than Aug. 15.

Mrs. Ima Strahan, another of those grand Oregon cooks who are making this section famous for near perfection in cuisine, has accepted a position at the Collins grill.

Rumors spread easily. Sometimes they are started deliberately, maliciously. Sometimes they are found to be—just rumors. But in this case it wasn't just a rumor. Several travelers driving south toward Gold Beach put into tourist camps outside of Port Orford and were amazed to find tourist camps. They had been told in Port Orford that there were NO tourist camps between here and Gold Beach... and strangely, they all quoted the same parties who had given them this misinformation. There are tourist camps and places to eat between here and Gold Beach, neighbors... and good ones. Let's play fair with our neighbors and they'll play fair with us.

Pat Patterson and wife from North Bend and Mrs. Whitney from California, were Friday visitors at the MacDonald home.

Mrs. Margaret Corbin is in the Gold Beach hospital recovering from an operation.

John Masterson has been hobbling around town for the past few days as the result of an infection in his foot. At the present writing, however, John reports the nether digit on the mend.

C. P. Hansen of Portland, distributor for automotive and electric supplies, was a business visitor in Port Orford this week.

Mrs. D. O. Breeden, mother of Mrs. John Leith returned to her home in Sacramento Tuesday after spending several days at the Leith home here. Her son, Owen, drove over to the California capital and will return to Port Orford shortly.

Mrs. Mary Castle, mother of Laurence Koch, is visiting here from Yakima, Wash., home of the world-famous apple.

Mrs. Laurence Koch is helping Mrs. Leith in the dress-making department of Leith's Variety.

John Kasperek and wife of Spokane were visitors in Port Orford recently. Odd name. And it intrigued Mrs. George Collins for it happened to have been her family name. She met the Kaspereks and saw in Mr. Kasperek a striking likeness to her father. And... you guessed it neighbors... John Kasperek turned out to be her father's cousin. The visitors had a fine visit with the Collins' and left with a promise to return shortly for another stay in Port Orford.

The Port Orford POST spread the names of Port Orford merchants all over Coquille Sunday... literally and figuratively. For why... the pioneer neighbors were short of tablecloths at spots along the great tables in the community house. A Port Orford POST (we always tote 'em along for just such emergencies) filled in very nicely with the diners reading the ads while they munched their chicken. Even saw one old timer reading HOWDY NEIGHBOR, but he turned the page sheepishly when somebody caught him at it.

We think we said once before that Bert Hoggett was cutting meat for Norm up at Norm's Food Center. If we didn't, however, Bert's doing a mighty fancy job with the saws and the knives up yonder toward Battle Rock state park.

Mrs. Norman Morsing, who recently cut her hand while at work at Norm's Food Center, was a patient for a time this week in the Coquille hospital where an operation was performed on her hand. In healing after the injury, one finger became stiff. The operation united severed tendons: Mrs. Morsing will have the hand in a cast for a month.

Discarding his crutches with a nonchalant: "to heck with them," Arie MacDonald started his vacation with both feet on the ground despite an injury sustained in a fall last week. And to prove the foot could take it, Arie headed for his mining claims to do assessment work. Meanwhile, Mrs. MacDonald, Jr., is taking his place at the C. A. Long general merchandise store.

L. W. McDonald of Bergstrom & McDonald, lumber firm of Los Angeles, Calif., was a visitor in Port Orford the end of the week. D. E. Baird brought to Port Orford Beach Monday on business connected with the selective service.
