OUTDOOR RAMBLINGS

Program Strives to Regain Early American Marksmanship

By Lans Leneve
A curious item that appeared in London newspapers late in 1775 gave Englishmen a hearty laugh.
It was a letter from an American, warning British officers to make their wills if they intended to fight the American revolutionary patriots.
"This province," the apparently crazy American boasted, "has raised 1000 riflemen, the worst of whom will put a ball into a man's head at a distance of 150 to 200 yards."

Less than five years later, the "American's" boast had proved to be neither crazy nor funny. Backwoods soldiers using crude cumbersome weapons had crushed the well-disciplined Redcoats out of the 13 colonies.
One group of 509 Tennessee backwoodsmen had killed 400 British soldiers and captured more than 4000. A sharpshooting New York volunteer had
