'Future' Post Office Being Used At Fair

Visitors to the New York World's Fair from Port Orford have an unusual opportunity to see a post office of the future, Postmaster Norm Baker said today.

A carefully-chosen group of 19 employees from New York area post offices man the facility which handles all the Fair's mail and some from the Flushing, New York area. The outside mail is used to keep the highly mechanized devices operating at "full tilt".

The post office handles approximately 250,000 pieces of mail each day.

Post cards to friends and relatives back home are a big item. About 30,000 are mailed from the Fair each day. One third of these are addressed to persons overseas.

Foreign visitors have no trouble understanding U.S. postal operations. The facility has staff members who speak twenty languages.

Postmaster Baker notes that residents of Port Orford who attend the Fair and wish to try out their foreign language ability can either talk with the multi-lingual window clerks or listen to a tape recorded presentation in the post office lobby which features individual earphones for those who speak Japanese, French, German, Italian and Spanish.

New equipment on hand includes an experimental Pitney-Bowes Centrifed which spins envelopes rapidly around a wheel-like mechanism and places them upright on their longest side. They then move into a machine which cancels stamps and postmarks envelopes at a rate of 500 letters a minute.

Letters are sorted to go all over the world by machines which position the mail so that the addresses are visible to an operator who sits in front of a keyboard similar to that on a typewriter. By pressing the correct buttons, 100 letters a minute are automatically directed to bins for 50 different destinations.

A larger device, the Burroughs sorter, drops letters and cards into 131 different bins at a rate of 58 letters per minute for each of the twelve operators.

The work area is surrounded by a ramp and gallery for visitors which is open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., seven days a week. Tape recorded vignettes explain the action on the work floor and describe the operations of each machine.

Outside the building, mail boxes from 21 countries serve as background for the red, white and blue box of the United States.

A prototype stainless steel mail box being tested as an eventual replacement for the standard box used for the past forty years is located at one of the Fair's busiest intersections.

Postmaster Baker suggests that Port Orford area visitors to the Fair express their comments on the new box by dropping a note addressed to the "Superintendent, World's Fair Post Office" through the modernistic mail slot. Postage is not necessary. If they wish, visitors may discuss their reactions with clerks at the post office building.

Crop Insurance Coverage Asked

Washington, D.C.—The House Agriculture Committee has now recommended legislation raising from 100 to 150 the number of new counties which may be brought under the Federal Crop Insurance Program each year, Congressman Robert B. Duncan (D-Ore) said today.

"This move is particularly important to the Fourth District since only barley and wheat crops in Linn County are now covered in our area and we have many other crops that would benefit from this all-around insurance protection," Duncan said.

He cited Jackson county pear growers as an example. These growers lost approximately 250,000 boxes of winter pears following the 1952 Columbus Day Storm "and if they had been covered by the Crop Insurance their losses would have been greatly minimized," Duncan said he made many attempts to have Jackson County pears included at that time. "Existing coverage limitations prohibited their inclusion then, but if the pending measure is passed, their coverage is possible," Duncan said.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation has been conducting on a limited, experimental basis since 1948 following an unfavorable experience with the plan during the 1930's. Since 1948, 1,187 counties have been included in the program and premiums are now sufficient to cover all of the project's costs.

"The program is now operating at a profit and is generally accepted by farmers and public alike," Duncan said.

The Congressman added he hoped for a "quick passage" of the bill, which was sent to the House Floor this week.
