

Battle Rock Students Tour State Capitol

Completing a short chapter of youthful pleasant memories were 37 eighth grade students of Battle Rock Junior High with their teacher, Miss Clarice Hopkins, and chaperones, Mrs. Blaine Marsh, Mrs. Gil Rush, Mrs. Roy Carr, Mrs. Rod McKenzie, Mrs. Roy Enlund, Mrs. Donald Stole, Mrs. Robert McKenzie and bus driver, A. W. "Tiny" Lawrence when they returned Friday evening from a two-day visit to the State Capitol in Salem.

The students left Port Orford early Thursday morning and visited the State School for the Deaf at mid-morning where they observed classes of all ages in session. Ages for students attending this school are from four years through 20. Louis Myers, superintendent, met the visiting students in a preliminary meeting in the school auditorium.

Following lunch at the banquet room of the Senator hotel they visited the birthplace of Oregon's state government, Champeo, the Robert Newell Home and the state park which contains the historical marker, (the site of Oregon Provincial government). Oregon marketing was observed with a trip through Meier and Frank's department store to observe mercantile marketing.

The class met in the evening at the Senator hotel for a banquet with Mr. and Mrs. Loren P. Steiner, former principal of the Bandon junior high, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ebersole as guests. Mr. Steiner represented the State Board of Education by invitation and represented Leon Minear, state superintendent of public instruction. Ebersole is chief officer of the state capitol building. The guests were impressed with the class members' pleasing manners, and excellent delivery of the flag salute, the Preamble to the Constitution, National Anthem and the state song, "Oregon My Oregon." The evening ended with recreational bowling at Eastwood Lanes and a view of the lighted capitol dome.

Friday morning the students entered the Rotunda of the capitol under the escort of Ebersole, who explained the murals and other interesting details of the capitol building. Students received a surprise when they were given a trip to the Governor's private office.

Robert McKenzie, class president, presented Gov. Mark Hatfield with three pieces of stained myrtlewood candelabra in graduated sizes. The Governor's office is encased in myrtlewood and he was very pleased with the gifts from the class and showed the students many mementos he had received in the past eight years since he has been governor. He expressed his regret in leaving office and not being there in the future to greet the annual visitors. A visitor replied, "They would see him in Washington!"

Students viewed the gallery of the House of Representatives and Senate Chambers, and then Ebersole let them climb the steps to the Rotunda Dome, the first class which has ever been invited to do so. Before leaving, each member received a Capitol Guide Book, and a State Seal. For the two members of the class who could not make the trip, Carol Moore and David Russell, two gold State Seals personally signed by the Governor, were given to the class for the delivery.

Following lunch in the capitol cafeteria, students visited the State Prison store and the Oregon State School for the Blind.

Robert McKenzie, in behalf of the class and the Port Orford Lion's Club, presented Mr. Edwards, superintendent of the school, a check for $25.

On the return trip through Corvallis the students had planned to visit the Horner Museum but were unable to due to painting the building. They visited several other Oregon State University campus buildings.

Students attending were Kevin

LIBRARY LOWDOWN

This week is National Library Week. The motto "Keep Growing-Read!" emphasizes one of the important functions of the library. Many new books have been added during the past year and everyone is invited to peruse them.

One of the new non-fiction books recently received is "Catherine the Great" by Zoe Oldenbourg. This is the fascinating story of an obscure German Princess who became Empress of Russia. Born Sophia Augusta Fredericka of Anhalt-Zerbst, a poor German principality, she was married to Grand Duke Peter, grandson of Peter the Great of Russia, while still a child. Separated from her family, she spent her teenage years in a foreign land with an immature, hostile husband and his suspicious aunt who was then Empress of Russia. She was extremely lonely. Anyone who showed friendliness toward Catherine was immediately exiled. She grew up between fear for her life and a strong desire to rule Russia.

When the Empress died, Catherine's husband was crowned Peter III. He was a weak ruler and showed signs of insanity. Catherine was persuaded to take over. Peter was killed and she was crowned Empress Catherine II.

Catherine's greatest desire was to be regarded as a wise ruler. She corresponded with such enlightened men as Voltaire and Diderot. She won wars and brought much enlightenment and fame to Russia; yet she subjected the peasants to a life of slavery.

Although Catherine will go down in history as a great ruler, her fame as a woman will also last. Her many love affairs scandalized most of Europe.

Anyone with an overdue book is asked to return it as no overdue fines will be collected this week.
